Iran's U.K. embassy seized

Rebel patriots take 21 hostage

LONDON (AP) — Three Iranian Arab gunmen invaded Iran's London embassy today and seized 21 hostages, including a British police guard, Scotland Yard said.

Unconfirmed reports said the raiders threatened to kill their captives and blow up the building unless political prisoners in Iran are released.

The top Iranian diplomat in London, Charge d'Affaires Gholam-Ali Afrouz, was believed to be among the hostages, said the British news agency Press Association.

Mehdi Sazegara, the embassy cultural attache, was not in the embassy when it was seized, but later issued a statement warning that Iran held Britain responsible for the safety of its diplomats under international law.

"I must make it clear that the safety of everyone within the embassy is the responsibility of the English government," Sazegara said. "We are responsible for the English embassy in Iran so it is quite obvious you must take full responsibility for our staff."

One hostage, a woman who police said was suffering from severe shock, was released five hours after the takeover and was carried out on a stretcher.

Police said the gunmen identified themselves as Arabs from Iran's southwestern province of Khuzestan — which they call Arabistan — who support Arab autonomy from the Persian-dominated revolutionary government of Iran. Iran accuses Arab Iraq of fomenting unrest in the region.

"Another agitation of Iraq," was an Iranian foreign ministry spokesman's comment when informed of the embassy incident.

Police said the gunmen were upset by an early radio report that they might be Iraqis.

For months Khuzestan has been troubled by bombings and attacks on Iranian government officials and security officers by Arab militants. Dissidents among the some 750,000 Iranian Arabs have been demanding greater Arab control over education and other aspects of local life in Khuzestan. Some want to secede from Iran.

Some witnesses reported having heard shooting inside the building, but police disputed this and said that as far as they knew no one was hurt.

The embassy has a staff of about 25 diplomats, as well as a number of non-diplomatic personnel. Witnesses said they saw a small number of men and women fleeing the building, in the prosperous, embassy-filled Kensington district opposite Hyde Park, shortly before police arrived at about 11:30 a.m. London time.

Negotiations with the intruders took place by telephone and through an open window at the front of the embassy, a police spokesman said. With policemen at the window was a young, dark-haired woman in a floral-print dress and police-issue, blue flak-jacket who appeared to be acting as an interpreter.

A police spokesman at the scene said the gunmen were "making certain demands which are being investigated," but refused to elaborate.

Scotland Yard refused to comment on reports the invaders were threatening to kill their captives and blow up the embassy if political prisoners were not freed in Iran. But police said the gunmen had set no deadline.

Some time after police began talking with the gunmen, three women, one with a baby in a stroller, were brought to the embassy doorway and taken into the building. At least two were Middle Eastern in appearance. There was was no explanation for their arrival.

Deputy Assistant Police Commissioner John Dellow said the three men, armed with rifles and possibly other weapons, entered the embassy through a back door and proceeded to the front of the building, where they grabbed the police guard, a member of London's Diplomatic Protection Group.

Beggars, drunks 'turning Victoria into Skid Road'

By AL FORREST

Four Victoria organizations are asking city council and the police to get tough with panhandlers and drunks in the downtown area.

"They're turning the city of gardens into Skid Road," said Victoria Restaurant Association president George Acs.

"It's a disgrace."

Also concerned are the Visitors Information Centre (VIC), the Victoria Downtown Business Association and the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Their complaints:

— The city has been hit with more beggars than usual and earlier in the year.

— They walk into the Causeway tourist bureau and ask tourists for money to get to Vancouver.

— Drunks wander into the bureau at night and harass the female staff members.

— They gather in a zone from Bastion Square to the Causeway, shouting obscenities, asking for money and occasionally urinating in public.

"It's no fun to be accosted by these people and it is especially troublesome when you are on the town for an evening," Acs said.

"They come right up to you and ask for money. Some of them get quite belligerent if you refuse. There's no use phoning the police. They can't do anything."

Federal laws permit police to take action if someone is drunk and disorderly in a public place but sections allowing police to act against loitering have been removed.

Victoria police say there is little they can do about begging under present laws unless the panhandler physically obstructs a citizen.

He said council should bring in a tough bylaw giving police power to deal effectively with the problem.

"Begging isn't necessary any more. There are social services available to handle this kind of problem. The panhandlers are giving Victoria a bad appearance."

The VIC is also writing a letter of protest, especially in view of a number of verbal assaults on female staff members.

Canadian playmate of the year

LOS ANGELES (AP) — This year's sexiest girl-next-door is from the country next door, Playboy Magazine announced Tuesday.

Dorothy Stratten of Vancouver was named 1980 Playmate of the Year, the first Canadian to win the title since it was established 21 years ago by Hugh Hefner's magazine for men.

Clad in a strapless gold wraparound dress, the shapely blonde 20-year-old claimed a $25,000 cheque Tuesday and almost $175,000 worth of prizes amid much popping of flashbulbs at a gala Playboy Mansion chicken crepes-and-seafood luncheon.

"I'll always be a Canadian at heart, and I'm very, very proud to be the first Canadian Playmate of the Year," she said.

Eagleson cancels '80 Canada Cup

Canadian Press

The 1980 Canada Cup hockey tournament has been cancelled, Toronto lawyer Alan Eagleson announced today.

The announcement at a noon news conference followed growing opposition by the public and National Hockey League players and executives to the planned September tournament which was to have included a Soviet Union team.

Numerous athletes and officials had condemned the planned Soviet participation while Canada and the United States are boycotting the Moscow Olympics in protest against the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Eagleson, chief international negotiator for Hockey Canada and executive director of the NHL Players' Association, told the news conference:

"During the last 24 hours I have been in contact with several NHL player representatives and the majority have agreed that they don't feel they can support the 1980 Canada Cup concept with Soviet participation.

"Many of the players realize that 1980 might be the last opportunity they have to represent their country in the tournament because of their age. But the players unanimously agreed that because of the sacrifice the Olympic athletes have made to not go to Moscow that we had no alternative but to cancel the Cup."

Although the cancellation was made by Hockey Canada and confirmed by Hockey Canada chairman Lou Lefaive, it appeared it was the opposition voiced by NHL players that forced the decision after the federal government earlier said it would not ban participation by the Soviet hockey team. Many top NHL players had said they would not want to play if the Soviet team was involved.

"If they are invited and if I'm asked to play, I'd turn down the invitation," said Bobby Clarke of the Philadelphia Flyers, captain of the victorious Canadian squad in the 1976 Canada Cup. "No way I would play."

Montreal Canadiens defenceman Larry Robinson said the amateur athletes who are being denied a trip to Moscow should not be the only ones to suffer.

"They go ahead and train

U.S. index takes plunge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. index of economic indicators declined in March by the third-largest amount since the Depression, the commerce department said today, providing more evidence that the country might face a severe recession.

The index fell 2.6 per cent last month — the eighth decline in the last 12 months and the steepest since September, 1974, when the index fell three per cent as the economy was sinking into the 1974-1975 recession.

"It means forces are very much tilted toward recession," said Feliks Tamm, a commerce department analyst.

Riot mars Dutch coronation

By JANE O'HARA
FP News Service

AMSTERDAM — Troops of Dutch riot police — some wearing steel helmets and carrying rifles, others mounted on horseback — surrounded Amsterdam's historic Dam Square to prevent thousands of rioting youths from storming the ceremonial inauguration of Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands. It was a coronation under siege.

Violent clashes between Amsterdam's squatters and shield-carrying riot police first broke out at 11 a.m. today when a group of squatters tried to take over an empty building two kilometres from Amsterdam's royal palace and New Church, the site of Beatrix's coronation ceremonies.

While riots continued at a distance, Beatrix was greeted on the balcony of the palace by boos and cheers, a mixture of smoke bombs and ticker tapes.

The initial riots were quelled when police using clubs and police in vans drove through and at the rebels. The squatters retaliated by throwing stones, smoke bombs and beer cans at their adversaries.

As the day wore on, and the inauguration ceremonies moved to the New Church, the gangs rapidly moved closer to the Dam Square.

Police were hampered by an estimated one million people who added to the crush because of Tuesday's public holiday.

By 3 p.m. the riots had reached the outskirts of the square. More police were moved in, and policemen formed human barricades down many side streets leading to the square.

As Mozartian strains sounded in New Church, police were showered with missiles. The riots, however, did not disrupt the sombre religious service which was attended by 57 heads of state, including Britain's Prince Charles, Canada's Governor-General Ed Schreyer and his wife Lily, and many of the crowned heads of Europe.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, in which Beatrix was sworn-in, succeeding Queen Juliana whose 32-year reign ended his morning when she signed her formal abdication, the distinguished international guests paraded from the New Church to the Royal Palace. As they did so, they were booed and jeered by an estimated 50,000 people who crushed into the square.

The squatters, known as Krakers, are left-wing extremists who for the past three months have been violently protesting Amsterdam's housing shortage.

In March Dutch troops and policemen bulldozed a squatter settlement which had been erected in several Amsterdam streets.

The outbreak of violence came as no surprise to the authorities. They had been expecting trouble from the Krakers as well as from Republican sympathizers, and South Moluccan terrorists.

Police get the word on fuzz

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Neat and tidy moustaches and sideburns are officially okay for Victoria police but beards are out, according to grooming standards adopted today by the city police board.

"Hair is to be neatly groomed and styled, but not to extend below the middle of the collar when member is in a standing position, and without excessive outward flair," is the requirement for male members of the force.

Policewomen likewise must have neat hairstyles, but their hair may not extend below the tip of the clavicle when they are standing.

Policemen's hair may also not extend below the middle of the ear and sideburns are to be squared off and no longer than the bottom of the earlobe.

"Styling of hair and sideburns is to be compatible with the uniform?" asked police board member Alf Hood, reading one section of the guidelines.

"Well, it's a value judgment," said Chief William Snowdon.

Regarding facial hair, the standards say: "Sworn members shall be clean and neat in person and clean shaven, with the exception that moustaches may be worn."

They may not extend more than half an inch below the corner of the mouth and no higher than the bottom of the nostril.

"The width of the moustache is not to extend beyond an imaginary vertical line from the outside corner of the eyes."

Special circumstances or assignments may allow exceptions to the standards subject to authorization from an officer of the department.

Victoria police have not had any official guidelines on grooming.

The new standards are the outcome of a year of talks involving the police union and ex-chief Jack Gregory and present chief Snowdon.

They are a compromise agreed to by the union and the commanding officers.

They are more restrictive than other police force guidelines. Saanich policemen may wear beards, for example.

It's time to run: volcano watchers

OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI) — Gov. Dixy Lee Ray was urged today to evacuate all scientists, loggers and property owners from the area around volcanic Mount St. Helens by state officials concerned that tons of rock and ice on the peak's north face may collapse some 4,000 feet into Spirit Lake.

The governor's volcano watch group made the request after reviewing U.S. Geological Survey reports that the Goat Rocks area has bulged 20 feet in the last four days — an indication that lava might be moving into the base of the mountain.

State Department of Emergency Services spokesman Rick Lavalla said the watch group proposed the establishment of "red" and "blue" hazard areas around the mountain to avoid the danger of an avalanche, which could include the breakup of four 130-foot-thick glaciers.

"The hardest thing is to convince people of the danger," Lavalla said. "The mountain looks so serene, so people can't fathom 4,000 vertical feet of earth, rock and ice plunging into the lake in less than two minutes."

Lavalla said the immediate danger posed by the mountain is the possibility of the slide, which could bury several lodges, scout camps and a U.S. Forest Service ranger station.

Geologists said the cause of the bulging was either due to magma (molten rock) rising inside the mountain or the constant earthquakes in the area.

Shortly after Mount St. Helens began spouting steam and ash March 27 following 123 years of dormancy, Gov. Ray declared a state of emergency in the isolated area in the southwest Washington Cascades. However, loggers, scientists, residents and media personel have had limited access.

One of those residents is 83-year-old Harry R. Truman, the operator of St. Helens Lodge for 50 years, who says he won't leave "my mountain" unless it is "feet first."

The watch group's proposed "red zone" would encompass the immediate areas to the west and south, and the entire Spirit Lake area to the north and east. No one would be permitted in this area.

The blue zone would extend five miles outside the red zone and most of State Route 504 to a point 15 miles east of Interstate 5.

Workers ordered back

TRAIL (CP) — B.C. Labor Relations Board has ordered 3,000 striking mine workers at the Cominco Ltd. operation in Trail back to work.

The LRB order early today also forces management to accept the return to work with no action against the strikers — all members of United Steelworkers of America.

The wildcat strike began Monday when about 600 employees walked off the job, followed Tuesday by a full shutdown.

A Steelworkers spkoesman said the union is urging its members to obey the back-to-work order.

City urged to end panhandling rash

The centre will be open until midnight all summer to handle late-arriving tourists and there is a concern about lack of police protection for the young women.

Chamber vice-president Ron Campion has set up a special committee to investigate the extent of the problem and a letter will be sent to city hall as soon as the study is completed.

"This a a serious problem and it appears to be getting worse," Campion said.

Nootka Court merchants have also complained to city hall.

Acs said restaurants and other businesses are becoming concerned about the number of panhandlers approaching their customers.

Acs said he has lived in Victoria for 22 years and had never seen the problem so bad.

"When they had tougher laws there was never any begging in the downtown area and now it's everywhere."

He said police should be armed with an anti-loitering bylaw so they could tell people to move on.

"Right now if you call the police, the panhandler just promises he won't obstruct anyone and that's all that happens. As soon as the policeman leaves, he is back at it again."

One year ago, former alderman Murray Glazier attempted to get an anti-begging bylaw through council but it was defeated.

Some aldermen were concerned about spending upwards of $400 to prosecute someone who was on the street begging for a dime.

Trade cars I'll pay, boss urges

BOLTON, Ont. (CP) — A company president who says he hates the Soviet Union has asked five employees who drive Russian-made Ladas to trade them for some other model of car — at his expense.

"It was a request, not an order, and they all agreed to join my individual protest against the invasion of Afghanistan," Robert Schad of Husky Injection Moulding Systems said Tuesday.

"They weren't happy with the Ladas' performance anyway, and the company will pay whatever it costs them — well, anything within reason — to buy similar models."

He said he also advised the other 300 employees at his plastics plant against buying Ladas if they want to park on the company parking lot in this community about 25 kilometres northwest of Toronto.

"I believe it is up to every individual who loves freedom to support government measures against the Russians," he said.

Canada Cup off to boycott Soviets

for four years and then they can't go. Why should we play?"

Phil Esposito of New York Rangers said the tournament can't go ahead until the NHL Players' Association approves player participation. Esposito said he would recommend at the association meetings May 29 that if a Canada Cup is held, the Soviet Union be excluded.

Montreal team-mate Rod Langway, an American, said: "I have a brother serving in the armed forces in West Germany.

"I would not want to play against the Russians."

Other NHL players to express similar sentiments included Pierre Laroche, Mark Napier, Steve Shutt and Bob Gainey of the Canadiens and Lanny McDonald of the Colorado Rockies.

NHL officials have the same opinion as the players.

"I feel the NHL has a strong obligation to back the boycott and a way in which it can be done is to exclude the Soviet participation in the Canada Cup," said Harry Sinden, Boston Bruins general manager.

"Whether people out there realize it or not the Russians have a war going on in Afghanistan," said Frank Griffiths, majority shareholder of the Vancouver Canucks. "And to my way of thinking anyway, I consider it damn foolishness to subsidize them in a Canada Cup tournament."

Even longtime NHL foes, Harold Ballard and Ed Snider, agreed the Canada Cup should be called off.

"We must address ourselves to public opinion," said Snider, Philadelphia Flyers owner. "And if the anti-Soviet sentiment is as strong as it appears to be, we should cancel the tournament."

Ballard was one of the first to announce his opposition to the tournament, saying he would not allow a game played in Maple Leaf Gardens if the Soviet Union is among the six teams invited.

However, Eagleson noted that the Gardens is the proposed site for a World Cup gymnastics meet in October when Russian athletes are expected to compete.

Firebombs probed

VANCOUVER (CP) — An investigation is under way into a second firebomb attack on the home of a provincial human resources ministry employee, police said Tuesday.

Police said a Molotov cocktail caused minor damage to the front porch of a home in which Robin Katherine Knights, 37, lives early Sunday.

Federal lawyers barred from drug case

VANCOUVER (CP) — A lawyer who successfully challenged regulations under the Food and Drug Act said Tuesday the court ruling raises the question of whether other cases are being proceeded with properly.

Lawyer Paul Williamson, who acted for Stephen Kripps and Kripps Pharmacy Ltd., said there are many cases where people have been charged under the Food and Drug Act and are being prosecuted by federal prosecutors. County court Judge Douglas Wetmore ruled Tuesday that federal lawyers cannot prosecute the cases because provincial authorities are responsible for prosecuting them.

Williamson said Wetmore's decision raises the question of whether those cases will proceed but does not rule out the possibility of provincial attorneys-general consenting to federal prosecutors acting in the cases.

Under the British North America Act, the federal government passes substantive criminal law and the provinces must administer it.

Wetmore ruled as invalid the Food and Drug Act regulations under which Kripps was charged with unlawfully selling the cancer drug Laetrile.

The judge also ruled that because the charges were criminal the federal prosecutor could not proceed with the case.

Williamson argued before Wetmore that the Food and Drug Act is criminal law and therefore the provincial government should undertake prosecution. Kripps and his pharmacy were charged with seven counts dealing with the sale and packaging and representation of the drug and one of importing.

Wetmore ruled that the regulations covering six of the charges were invalid.

He said that the seventh count dealt with importation of drugs under regulation A.01.040 and that this legislation may be valid as a regulation dealing with international trade.

The charges alleged that the accused unlawfully sold a new drug, Amygdalin, before the manufacturer had filed submissions on the drug with the minister of national health and welfare, contrary to regulation C.08.002.

The prosecution contended that the regulation was valid under provisions in the BNA Act covering criminal law, law relating to the regulation of trade and commerce, or law for the peace, order and good government of Canada.

Crown counsel D. C. Tarnow contended that the Food and Drug Act was legislation adopted to deal with a genuinely new problem which did not exist at the time of Confederation and could not be classed as matters of a local or private nature.

Wetmore said that the sale of new drugs could not give rise to a national emergency or be considered a new problem not existing at the time of Confederation.

He ruled that the regulation C.08.002 is not valid legislation and is an invasion of sections of the British North America Act which give administrative powers to the provinces.

Prime rate still high for lumber industry

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Lumber production in northern B.C. has dropped by 13.5 per cent and, until mortgage rates drop significantly, the bleak outlook for the area is not expected to change, industry spokesman Van Scoffield said Tuesday.

Scoffield, manager of the Northern Interior Lumber Sector of the Council of Forest Industries of B.C., has compiled information in the area from Highway 16 northward, as part of a move throughout the province to find out if the current lumber market situation really is as bad as forecasts indicate.

He said research shows that most of the drop is in the form of a reduced work week to four days, but a number of operations have had to cut back by dropping shifts and, in a few cases, by total closure.

"The recent monitor reductions in the U.S. and Canadian prime interest rates are encouraging," he said, "but mortgage rates are unaffected so far.

"Lumber market prices appear to have stopped falling and held for the moment, but at disastrous levels. No one can say yet when lumber-sales volumes and prices will return to survivable levels."

Prices of lumber began falling last October after levels for a thousand board feet approached $300 or better earlier that year. Prices now are down to about $140.

U.S. house construction, stalled by high interest rates, normally accounts for up to 82 per cent of northern interior lumber production.

Beer workers break from east

By MIKE HUGHES

About 1,300 members of the brewery workers union are going through the process of splitting from their national body and forming their own B.C. union.

Union secretary John Langley said Tuesday votes to disaffiliate from the Toronto-based Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers have been held and the members have opted to go it alone.

Discussions are now under way with the Canadian Labor Congress to become a chartered member of the national labor body under the probable title of the Brewery and Soft Drink Workers Union.

There are three B.C. locals of the union, one of them represents about 100 employees at Labatts' bottling plant in Victoria.

The main reason for the split, Langley said in an interview from Vancouver, is because the national body insists on national bargaining whereas the B.C. members favor company-by-company negotiations.

There is also some bitterness left over from a three-month strike by the B.C. workers in 1978.

The B.C. members claim the national body cut off their strike funds after a certain period with the result that they were starved out in the labor dispute.

Langley said the B.C. workers don't want national bargaining because the B.C. contracts tend to be better than those in eastern Canada.

"Their temporaries, for example, are little more than slaves as far as we are concerned," he said.

"There are a lot of other things too and we don't want to be dragged down."

When the break-away move first began, efforts were made to set up a western region union representing B.C. and Alberta brewery workers, Langley said.

However, this initiative collapsed and Langley said the Alberta workers will likely become members of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union.

The brewery workers' contracts with Carlings, O'Keefe, Labatts and Molsons expired April 20. No dates have been set yet for negotiations.

China opens four cities

PEKING (AP) — Four cities in Fujian province, facing Nationalist Taiwan across the Taiwan Straits, have been opened to foreigners, the Peoples Daily has reported. One of the four, Amoy, is within sight of the Nationalist-held offshore island of Quemoy. The other three are Fuzhou, Zhangzhou, and Quanzhou. The paper said the four cities are productive, scenic and full of historical relics.

Silence, then panic as plane crashed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A silence fell over passengers on a flight to Sechelt before panic and screaming broke out as the Twin Otter plane banked over and crashed, an inquest was told Tuesday.

"I felt there was a problem when I detected panic on the plane," said passenger Leslie Buker. "You could feel people go quiet and then there was screaming as the plane banked to the right."

Pilot Brian Rodney Craven died when he was partially decapitated by one of the plane's propellers. Another passenger, Ralph Grimm, of Montreal, died later in hospital and 13 passengers and co-pilot John Lynch were injured.

Jurors were told the floatplane, operated by West Coast Air Services and chartered to Tyee Air, was making a normal approach to Sechelt when it suddenly banked over and came down in trees.

The plane was making a compulsory scheduled stop, in compliance with federal regulations, although no passengers or freight was to be dropped off or picked up.

Iranians barred from study at UBC

VANCOUVER (CP) — Five Iranian students who have been refused re-admittance to the United States won't be allowed to continue their studies at the University of British Columbia, a university spokesman said Tuesday.

The admissions committee of the UBC Senate has refused to admit the five, saying it is unable to consider the applicants as a block, the spokesman said.

The five were among 100 University of Idaho architecture students who came here on a field trip April 6.

They were unable to return to the U.S. when President Carter barred Iranians from entry — including those on visas for trips outside the U.S.

Show him he's wrong

Dick Collver was once very nearly the premier of Saskatchewan. He resurrected the Conservative party in that province and brought it from nowhere to being a major force in Saskatchewan politics.

The rest of the country can only hope that he fares more poorly on his latest venture.

Collver has now deserted the Conservative party and taken on a new group, called, according to a recent news release, "The Unionest Party." He promises to have branches started in all four western provinces within 60 days.

The Unionest Party has only one aim: to convince people from the west to forsake Canada and join the United States. Collver says:

"We first announced that it was our intention to sit as Independents in order to promote the option of a better union for the West with the United States of American than it presently enjoys within Confederation . . . A union that works, a known constitution that works, a system that works, a country that works, will be seen in time by most to be far better than the uncharted waters which lie ahead on the present course."

Collver's idea is surely more repugnant than Rene Levesque's sovereignty-association or even Western separatism proposals heard from time to time. Both those movements are based on some starry-eyed idea of nationalism and independence, no matter how far-fetched. They come from people who want a greater say in their own destiny and who believe their regional resources are large enough to allow it.

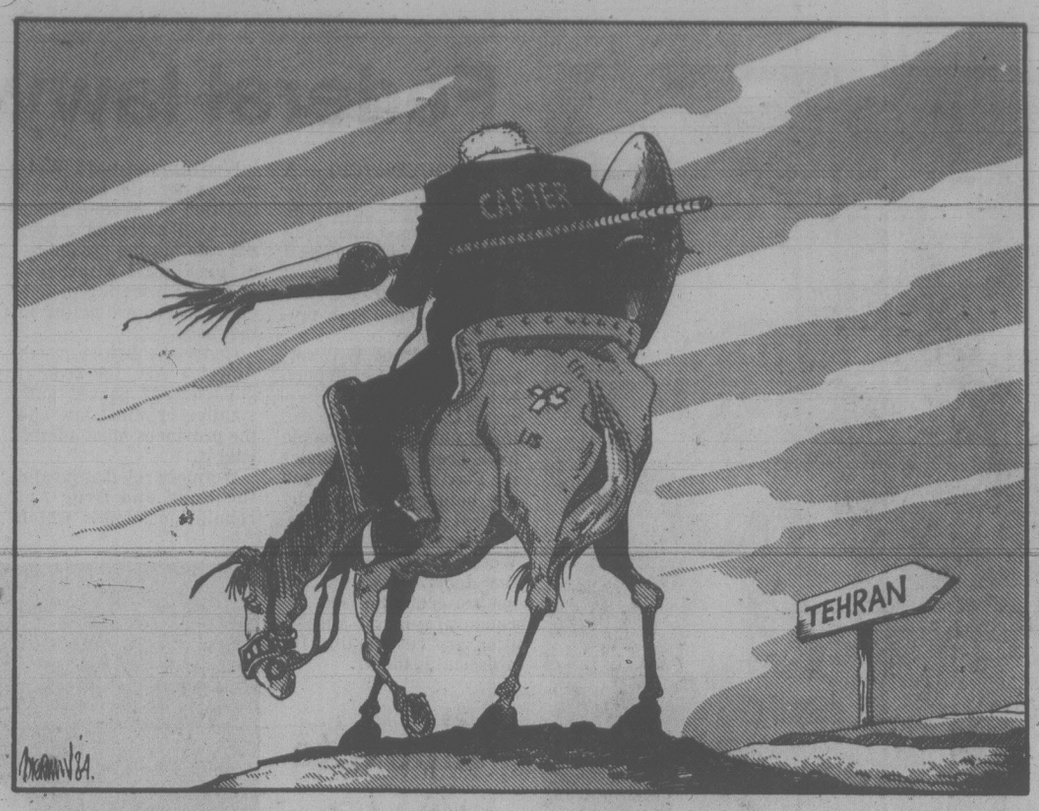
They are wrong. Both western Canadians and Quebecers can gain far more as a part of Canada than they can by striking out on their own.

Nonetheless, there is more to admire in the visions of these separatists than in Collver's idea of giving up one dependency for a greater one on the grounds that it will be easier than struggling with the changes Canada must meet in the next few years.

Collver's idea is based not on vision or idealism but solely on expediency.

He believes that the west is so exasperated with Ottawa that it will agree with his grand plan. He's right about the west's frustration, but he has misjudged the real complaint of western Canadians. They want more independence in conducting their own affairs, and so do most of the provinces.

Why give up the fight for this attainable goal in exchange for the right to send a handful of U.S. senators to Washington every two years?



RICHARD GWYN

Big government is beautiful

OTTAWA — If you passed Mike Kirby on the street, you wouldn't recognize him.

Don't feel guilty about this. Kirby's not famous; he doesn't get to go on TV. He's only important.

Just in case you do run into him, Kirby has scrubbed-face good looks; he's lean, shortish and has light-brown hair. Think of the kind of actor who plays "good guy" roles in the TV soaps, or an aspirant tennis pro, and you've about got him.

The other aspect of Kirby's credentials worth knowing is that he used to be Trudeau's No. 2 political aide, then became head of the Institute for Public Policy Research, which frets about the future and which no one takes seriously, and now is cabinet secretary for federal-provincial relations, which everyone takes very seriously. He, with a bit of help from Pierre Trudeau, is going to save Canada.

More, not less

The other day, Kirby said something interesting. He said that Canadians want government "to continue, even to expand, existing social-economic programs." Further, in language strikingly similar to that used a couple of days later in the government's Throne Speech, Kirby said, "It is not less government that people want, it is more efficient, effective government."

Beyond any doubt, Kirby is dead on. Beyond much doubt either, perhaps the most important recent change in the public's mood has been the shift of opinion from anti-big government to the pro-big government side.

The anti-spending attitudes that floated north in 1978-79 after California had voted for Proposition 13 seem now to be about as distant as, say, the love-peace movement of the '60s which also began, naturally, in California.

The change among persons-in-the-street always was predictable. After all, more than one in two Canadians depends upon government for the greater part of their income — all the way from civil servants, through teachers and hospital workers, to pensioners, and on down to anyone on welfare or on unemployment insurance.

The cult of cutbacks was popular only during the brief period when it seemed these might lead to less inflation. Nothing, it appears, leads to less inflation, while cutbacks, it turned out, affected not just the guy next door, but me. (And you.)

The more significant shift in attitude has occured among businessmen. Not counting a lunatic fringe of free enterprisers, the gathered collective call of the business community these days is spend, spend, spend. (Pay no attention to what Rotary, after-lunch speakers say; pay attention to the number of times they wink.)

Chrysler Canada is at the head of the queue. Ford Motor Company takes subsidies with one hand, and closes plants with the other. See if you can find a pulp and paper company which opposes government subsidies. Or a textile or clothing or shoe mill, or industrial milk plant, which wants the government to stop loading the cost of inefficiency on to the consumer by limiting foreign competition.

Listen, if your head isn't buzzing already, to the beefs of the shipyards about the need for a subsidized, maple leaf, merchant marine. Listen, a feat during which it is difficult to keep a straight face, to the oil and gas industry demand that government keeps its sticky hands off, but hand over the tax loopholes.

Business, these last couple of years, has made the same discovery as have Canadian persons-in-the-street: The less the government spends the less it will spend on them.

Kirby's, and Trudeau's, talk about Canadians wanting, "not less" but "more efficient" government is persuasive, although phoney. Most Canadians haven't the faintest idea whether government is or is not being more or less efficient just as most of us have no idea whether any story we read in the newspapers contains a single grain of fact, other than those stories (hockey games; auto accidents) we happen to have witnessed personally.

Smokescreen

The slogan, "Big is Beautiful, Provided it is Efficient," thus serves, both as an appeal for a suspension of disbelief as a smokescreen for what's going on. An expanded Petro-Canada. A new state trading corporation. A bigger budget deficit. More controls on foreign investment. An end to the Conservative chatter about cutting 60,000 from the civil service payrolls, and to selling off crown corporations. A new bureaucracy to scrutinize the books of the oil companies.

You may recall that on New Year's Eve, 1976, Trudeau put the entire country on its ear by musing about "a new society" in which "there's going to be more government, not less . . . more authority in our lives."

In the ensuing uproar, Trudeau kept on saying he didn't mean what he had said, and what all Canadians then thought he had meant to mean. It turns out now he did mean it. With one difference. Then, Canadians said, resign. This time, they are saying, right on.

Controlling Big Brother

Columnist Richard Gwyn makes a persuasive argument on this page in support of his observation that Canadians, whether intentionally or not, are seeking more federal government involvement in their lives, especially more economic intervention. He reinforces his views with a long list of government agencies, subsidies and tax shelters that promote or indeed suppress certain segments of the economy.

Another Canadian political scientist, Tom Kent, recently looked at the big government question from another angle, and came to a similar conclusion.

However, Kent went one step farther. He said the public wants more government control but is also seeking more control over the government. But he says that government is structured in such a way as to frustrate any meaningful participation by the public. In fact, he maintains, the structure promotes alienation and regional tensions.

In Policy Options, a publication put out by the Montreal-based Institute for Research on Public Policy, he writes that the growth of government has in part resulted from a growing public ambition to have some say in the major factors that affect their lives. He argues that while modern society has, on the one hand, given more individuals than ever before the time and money to express their 'individuality', they paid a price: the loss of any real say in the government and corporate decisions that can have far-reaching effects on their social and economic well-being.

As remote as the central government might be to some, the corporate boardrooms of the nation seem even farther removed. Although it would be a chicken-and-egg argument whether government or business has a greater effect on people's lives, the government is the place where the public has the opportunity for some influence. Dissatisfaction in several regions of the country points to the public's demand for that control.

The mushrooming number of complaints from western Canada about Ottawa's inability to identify and act on western aspirations supports Kent's contention that the electoral process and government mechanisms have failed to offer proper outlets for meaningful regional representation.

The point, of course, is that if Gwyn's and Kent's gloomy observations about bigger government are correct, then the channels between the public and their elected leaders had best remain clear to avoid Big Brother going his own way.

TOM WICKER

Loss of Vance hurts Carter

NEW YORK — All too many public officials subordinate their personal principles and misgivings to political loyalty or bureaucratic anonymity. Cyrus R. Vance, in refusing to do so, placed principle and integrity above the kind of "pragmatism" and "flexibility" that have done much to make government so profoundly mistrusted.

He also struck a sharp if unintended blow at President Carter's political prospects — a blow more damaging perhaps than the failure of the rescue mission in Iran that brought about Vance's resignation as secretary of state. His loss will hurt Carter severely, because Vance was widely considered the most impressive member of an otherwise undistinguished Cabinet.

This view was particularly prevalent abroad, where the administration needs all the little respect it has. After a critique of Carter policies, for example, Dr. David Owen, the former British foreign minister, once said to me: "But I'll tell you one thing. I've got a lot of time for Cy Vance."

Knew beforehand

That this respected man dissented from the decision to send the rescue mission to Iran is bound to call that decision, and hence Carter's judgment, further into question. Moreover, the president knew before he ordered the mission to proceed that it would bring about Vance's resignation.

That he went ahead despite such total opposition from his most senior and respected adviser — whose judgment ultimately was proved correct — may do honor to Carter's resolution. It also seems likely to add, however, to the impression that the mission may have been ill-considered — a reckless roll of the dice rather than the "completely practicable" operation the president claimed it was.

Democrats inclined already to vote for Edward Kennedy in the primaries and John Anderson in the general election will not be won back by the presumptive new ascendancy of Carter's hard-line national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski. Even if Vance's hand-picked deputy, Warren Christopher, is named secretary of state, he is unlikely to have Vance's strength, abroad or vs. Brzezinski.

Vance's resignation, moreover, has already opened the door somewhat on other policy disputes and bungles that have wracked the administration — for example, the United Nations vote to condemn Israeli settlements in the West Bank. When Carter claimed that vote was a mistake, Vance took the blame. Post-mortems on his resignation, however, are apt to make it clear that he considerd the vote to have reflected sound policy — and to disclose other skeletons in the administration closet that will not be helpful politically.

CYRUS VANCE

More serious than the political problems that Vance's departure will cause the president is the substantive loss to the Carter administration — Vance's calm, his judgment, the fact that he stood for what had seemed to be the administration's best instincts. No other official, including the president himself, could command so much respect for detente with the Soviet Union, a constructive new relationship with the third world, strategic arms limitation and restraint in the uses of power.

Now, like Vance, those approaches have been eclipsed by Brzezinski's harder-line policies, which appear to contradict what had been the tone and spirit of the Carter administration since its inception — Cy Vance's tone and spirit. The shift adds to the evidence that those publicized Vance-Brzezinski struggles did not represent a "creative tension" within the administration so much as they did Carter's fundamental lack of a world view of his own.

In early 1979, for example, when the shah's regime was crumbling in Iran, the president dispatched Gen. Robert E. Huyser to that country. Brzezinski and others wanted Huyser to demonstrate support for the shah and urge him to take a tough stand against the insurrection; Vance's state department urged that the general open lines to the opposition to prepare the way for a post-shah regime.

No shah, no credit

Carter, according to a study of the Huyser mission by The New York Times, "opted for a position in the middle" — a confusion which ultimately left the United States with no shah and no credit with those who overthrew him. That has all too often been the story of an administration divided in its councils and unguided from the top.

What is the president's real policy on Israeli settlements in the West Bank, for example? What did he actually think about that Soviet brigade in Cuba that he called unacceptable just before he accepted it? Is he committed to strategic arms limitation, or is his support conditioned on Soviet behavior on other issues? Why did he order the rescue mission after arguing for so long it could not succeed?

Calculated ambiguity on such matters is permissible and sometimes desirable. But if Carter's problem is, as evidence begins to suggest, a lack of long-considered and deeply held views of his own, the loss of Cyrus Vance may mark a turning point on more questions than Iran.

Send them home

Until those hostage-taking cowards in Iran have safely released all the American hostages, I firmly stand on the conviction that all Iranian citizens on Canadian soil should be, as swiftly as possible, returned to Iran. Yes, returned to Iran, and without any philosophical blather about the unconformed gossip surrounding the Shah's former administration, or the United States of America's supposed adverse influence upon the Iranian people. It is time for Canada to send home all Iranians, whether they are students, teachers, tourists, carpet sellers, or anything else.

Americans are the finest friends and neighbors Canadians could wish for and Canadians should go to no limits to help America resolve the sickening Iranian blackmail crisis.

Just imagine if those 50 hostages in Iran were Canadians — would Canadians appreciate all the support they could get from the American people? — J. Wickstrom, 3264 Shelly Street.

Why refuse?

I feel great sadness for those to whom this letter is directed, but I know it is my duty as a citizen to inform our "well meaning community" that some people who wish to offer their services of love and understanding as a volunteer to the sick or lonely are refused.

People's lives are still being greatly damaged by those who are in positions of authority but lack the wisdom to acknowledge that many of the people they serve have potential and value to share with society also.

I am one of these damaged people, for the other day, I was told that I was threatening, this being due to my physical handicap. The individuals that I spoke with had not even heard that my experiences as a volunteer have been 24 years. These people could only see my disability, not my ability. I have never heard such idiocy.

I possess a genuine compassion for the sick and lonely, yet those in authority can not see my worth or value as a person due to their own inability to see beyond my physical handicap.

I ask society one question, "Who has the greater handicap?" — Elly Bowerman, 712-865 View Street.

Sensationalism

In the troubled times of our world today, sensationalism by the news media has done nothing but add fuel to the fires. This irresponsible type of reporting is no better demonstrated than by your article of April 25, by your Lorraine Locherty, i.e. "Saturday Night Live — Marauding drunken teenagers even steal furniture from patios." As the story is told it would appear to the average reader that hundreds of innocent citizens are being harrassed by gangs of axe-wielding teenagers "in cars laden with booze."

As a resident of that particular area and as a parent of one of those "drunken marauding teenagers," I would like to put the situation into its proper perspective.

No doubt there is a problem with a few uncontrolled gatherings at the beach. Teenagers drinking beer, perhaps a bit of yelling and shouting.

At the same time a few unfortunate residents with whom we can sympathise, have a problem with this situation. However, the opening paragraph of Locherty's story — "Sounds of breaking bottles and foliage being ripped from the hill below Richard and Joan Impett's modern waterfront home," would lead the average reader to believe that Vietnam was mild compared to this battle. There is already enough friction between the police and the teenagers in this are without the media adding fuel to the fire. — Ron Henning, 1837 Penshurst Road.

Remember Ireland

The objections which are being expressed to the separation of Quebec from Canada are the same as those expressed to the separation of Ireland from Britain in 1922.

The objections proved to be invalid because when Ireland separated, trade treaties and citizenship rights were negotiated. After a period of separation Britain and Ireland are now coming together in the European Economic Community and the new European Parliament heralding the birth of a new European nation.

If and when Quebec separates, mutual economic interests will result in negotiations for trade and citizenship rights, failing which she will turn to the United States. A North American Economic Community will come into existence, Canada's economy being 90 per cent owned by the United States. In time, say during the next century, a North American nation will be evolved, to include Canada and Mexico, to keep the balance between the European, Chinese and USSR nations. — H. S. Thuillier, 2424 Beach Drive.

Bad drivers

Drivers who are the object of high speed chases in the wee small hours, endangering the lives of police and others and awakening hundreds of citizens, should be dealt with severely. — E. McLaren, 2523 Wark Street.

'PQ campaign is dishonest'

LEVESQUE . . . demagogy

By WILLIAM JOHNSON
The Globe and Mail

QUEBEC — The Parti Quebecois has shifted the meaning of the referendum away from the manifestation of the will of the people of Quebec, to a strategic exercise, the significance of which cannot be defined.

The idea of the referendum was for the people of Quebec to make clear, by a vote, what they want. But the PQ knew it would lose a referendum in which the people really declared what they want, sovereignty (with or without association) or federalism.

Don't tell the people of English-speaking Canada what you really want, the PQ has said. If you say what you really want, English Canada will go to sleep for a generation. The only means to effect a breakthrough, a "deblocage," is to pretend that you want sovereignty-association. Vote yes, not because you believe in sovereignty-association, but because you want constitutional change.

The PQ campaign is fundamentally dishonest in two ways. It knows perfectly well that a majority yes cannot possibly lead to a breakthrough; it will certainly lead to an impasse.

The PQ couldn't possibly negotiate renewed federalism following a majority yes vote, because that would be considered by its followers a betrayal of the mandate received in the referendum. But the federal government couldn't possibly negotiate sovereignty-association, because the starting point is accepting that the federal government go out of existence. The prime minister could not seriously entertain such a proposal on the basis of the ambiguous and hypothetical mandate now sought by the PQ.

What if there is a majority yes and Claude Ryan wins the following election? Premier Rene Levesque keeps suggesting that this would help Ryan win acceptance for his beige paper in the rest of Canada. That might be true, but what would it do in Quebec? If the population has voted by a majority in favor of a mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association, Ryan will ever after be charged with a kind of treason, a rejection of the will of the people, if he then negotiates renewed federalism. A new federal regime would begin with a large proportion of Quebec's population rejecting its legitimacy. What kind of a start would that be for a peaceful, united country? It is a formula for large-scale terrorism and civil disturbances a few years hence, far more serious than those which attended the passage of Bill 63 (giving freedom of choice of the language of education) back in 1969.

A majority yes vote is a formula for impasse or future disorder in Quebec. The leaders of the PQ must know this. But, to win the referendum for their own strategic reasons, they lull the people from every platform by holding out the illusion that constitutional negotiations can get under way if only there is a majority yes vote.

Here is what Normand Girard wrote last week in Le Journal de Quebec, about what Premier Levesque had said in his speeches the day before:

"The undertaking of his government consists in asking, on May 20, for a mandate to negotiate on the basis of equality between two peoples a change in this regime which everyone has denounced for 40 years.

" 'It is a question of honor,' he said, 'to demand equality and the first deblocage . . . at least, dammit, to say that this is the direction we want to go in.' "

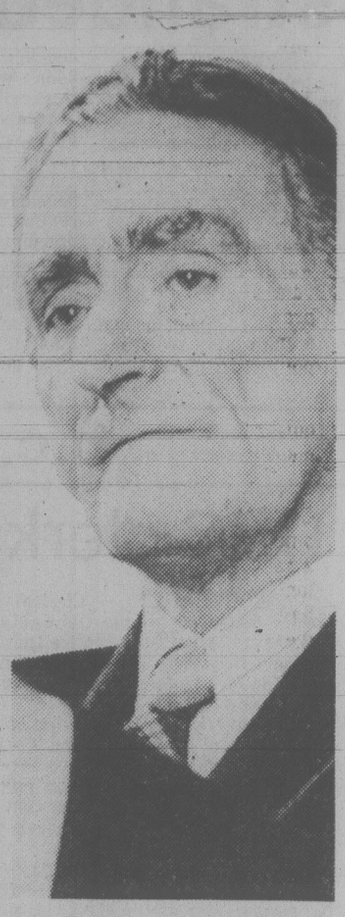
There is an example of consummate demagogy. It suggests that the result of a yes will be "a change" rather than the quite specific change of sovereignty-association, and that it will be "going in a direction," when the referendum question talks strictly about ending the right of the federal Parliament to pass laws or raise taxes. That is an all-or-nothing proposition: Parliament exists or it is abolished. You can't any more half-abolish it than you can be a little bit pregnant with sovereignty-association.

The second element of dishonesty and demagogy is to suggest that the important issue is what English Canada thinks, rather than what Quebec wants. What will matter to English Canada is the reality of what Quebeckers want, not the bluff of a number in the referendum. But first, Quebeckers have to tell themselves honestly what they want.

The PQ has counted on the defensive minority mentality of Quebec, which has always feared to divide its voices in dealing with English Canada. Thus, federally, Quebec elects only one party, the Liberals, while provincially it votes for several, and, in fact, keeps changing the government.

The result is that Quebeckers, after the referendum, will not know what they want, because they have been told by the PQ not to say it out loud, not to vote as they think, because it would let English Canada know, and English Canada might laugh or go to sleep.

This demagogy might be just humorous, but its long-term consequences in Quebec could be very serious, if the result of the referendum is a majority yes, but English Canada refuses to negotiate because it recognizes a bluff. That is a formula for riots.



RYAN . . . a hollow win?

The gifted child too often either exploited or ignored

By FRED M. HECHINGER
New York Times

A visitor to a school that took pride in the calibre of its pupils found himself seated at lunch next to an 8-year-old. It was early in the year and, to break the ice, the visitor asked his young neighbor what had been his favorite Christmas toys. "I am an intellectually gifted child, and I don't use toys," came the reply. The visitor then tried with indifferent success to rise to the boy's intellectual level while feeling sorry about the burden that had been placed on the child's shoulders.

Some years ago, a father made the rounds of newspapers and magazines to seek publicity for his young daughter, who had been nurtured on a steady diet of literature, mathematics and science virtually from infancy and managed to enter college some four years earlier than usual.

Such extreme flaunting of giftedness is rare in this society, which tends to play down intellectual prowess. Yet, it points to the two problems that, in the view of many experts, characterize the treatment of gifted youngsters. They are either given exaggerated, sometimes exploitative, attention, or they are ignored altogether. In either case, educators and other experts warn, both the individuals and the nation, which needs their talents, are poorly served.

Merrie Spaeth, a young television producer who believes that the problem has been aggravated by public and parental misconceptions about the gifted, has used the camera to record the stories of such children. She has sought out both child prodigies and "ordinary" gifted children to show what happens to them under different, favorable and unfavorable, conditions. (A segment of her work may be seen Thursday on ABC-TV's "20-20" program.)

At the age of 4, Ruth Slenczynska, now 54, was a piano prodigy. Her father arranged her concert schedule, acted as her agent and pushed her professional career. When she was 16, she fled both the piano and her father. Today, she teaches the piano and is a fine concert pianist, but feels that she did not fulfill her original promise because her talent was not allowed to develop at a more natural pace.

The same fate might have befallen Pinchas Zuckerman, the violinist, who as a child had already started a busy concert schedule in his native Israel. But at age 11, he was discovered by Isaac Stern, who brought him to the United States, cancelled all his concert engagements and made him direct his energies to studying.

"You need time to absorb and time to live," the master told the gifted student. Today, at 30, Zuckerman has attained international acclaim without having to look back on a miserable childhood.

Charles Kim, who has an intelligence quotient of well over 160, is "one of today's superkids," says Miss Spaeth. At age 9, he is a fine violinist and a student at The Juilliard School, but enjoys playing tennis as much as playing the violin. His parents say they don't want to push him onto the concert stage, that they want him to explore all his talents.

So, clearly, does Charlie. He speaks three languages, plays elaborate math games and finds it difficult to state a preference between music and science. (Many experts explain the frequent affinity between science and music among gifted children by the fact that both fields depend on talent rather than life experience.)

Why are the needs of gifted children so often distorted or ignored? One reason is that providing special programs for the gifted seems a violation of the egalitarian spirit to some people, who believe literally that "all men are created equal." A spokesman for one organization representing a minority group said: "All children are gifted." He suggested that it is not democratic to single out only a few for special opportunities.

Others feel that the gifted can fend for themselves and will come out on top anyway.

Miss Spaeth's films contradict that view. Carl Heye, 18, from the Bedford Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn, is now a senior at the Bronx High School of Science. He will attend Harvard College next year and, he hopes, law school eventually. But he remembers starting on the downhill slide — cutting classes, toying with drugs, considering dropping out — only a few years ago, when he was in junior high school and nobody paid attention to his talents. "I probably wouldn't have finished," if Bronx Science had not responded to him as gifted, he said.

In the prevailing climate, to excel is not always comfortable. Miss Spaeth reports that some of Carl's former street friends have since turned against him — verbally and even physically.

STERN . . . time needed to learn how to live

The colors of optimism

Katharine Whitehorn

LONDON — Touches of color in a hospital, in Northern Ireland, are likely to be the camouflage of jackets of soldiers guarding the politically wounded patients.

All the more surprising, then, that it is in two Northern Ireland hospitals that designer Jonathan Greene has been working out his innovations in using color to cheer up patients — he calls it the color of optimism — and in using the hospital's requirements in the way of furniture to help mental patients to recovery.

Hospitals are bleak places, even when — or perhaps especially when — they are modern and streamlined. All the corridors are bleakly lit from above, and even the rooms where the doctors see the patients have shadowless, third-degree lighting. And sloshing off-white paint endlessly along the walls has seemed the cheapest way of doing things ever since they abandoned the workhouse brown of Victorian times.

The bare, spare, clinical look may satisfy nurses because it looks clean; but it couldn't be less reassuring and it couldn't be less like home. Hospital managements have been aware of this for a long time; but at best they tend to paint one wall orange and to buy an expensive mural for the entrance hall — usually the one place that doesn't need it, what with the fruit kiosk and the news stand and the flower stall.

Jonathan Greene, a rugged-looking man in his early fifties with a face larger than life, realized that you could splash out on other kinds of flowers too — big red poppies, outsize daffodils and huge absurd butterflies — and get ten of them for the cost of one mural if you had them sign-painted.

He also thinks that color devalues itself with familiarity — you paint a wall orange, and after three days you don't see it any more. Not so with scale — you notice the man on the bus who's 8 feet high even if you see him every morning. So the flowers and butterflies are enormous. And he's interested to find that wherever he puts color and bright walls and colored rugs, the vandalism goes down — and this is in Lisburn, a town where there is nothing but graffiti to enliven things up. He also changed the lighting and then turned to furniture, which is his biggest innovation.

When he wanted more and better desks, bedside tables, and trolleys he found that, with Health Service budgets, he couldn't afford them. But right there on the premises were people who could make things — the mental patients and people doing occupational therapy. Why shouldn't they make the furniture? First, he asked for a round laundry bin — the patients were delighted, but sent back a square one; he realized that getting mental patients to come up to specification demanded something more than just off-handedly sending them a blueprint.

He is experienced however, at gouging good design out of different outfits: he started with IBM and left only when he felt he was becoming a square box himself; then he went into hotel design, which was fun; but grew tired of it because it was all fantasy; there was no "serious requirement." He likes hospitals because they are serious; he finds it enormously exciting that a man might be sitting across from the doctor and realize that he, himself, had made the desk the doctor was sitting at. The furniture is all wood: They are all wood. "There isn't anyone in Northen Ireland who can weld," he joked," and they shot the only finisher!"

Now he's working with the Belfast General Hospital, he has no illusions about the joys of living in such a place. He commutes across the Irish Sea from Cornwall, where he lives in an old rectory with wife and family. But he thinks that even the type of bad joke being told about his efforts points to success. "They say the psychiatrists are complaining: they say my furniture interferes with their rehabilitation program — because the patients are getting better and leaving too soon." And he denies to the end that he ever says "we're short of a joiner — could you put the word out to the doctors to certify a few good joiners as insane?"

Freighters pass by stranded fishermen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fisherman Leo Carter and his two crew members are finding it difficult to believe two freighters passed by them as they bobbed in a dinghy Tuesday off the west coast of Vancouver Island.

The three abandoned ship after an engine fire spread rapidly through their vessel.

"We just couldn't believe it," said Carter, 50. "They never spotted us, and we couldn't figure why they hadn't picked up our distress call."

A plane found them more than four hours after their escape.

Two search and rescue helicopters arrived but the rescue soon developed problems as the turbulence from the helicopters overturned their little dinghy, dumping all three men and a rescue frogman into the Pacific.

"So there we are, rubber raft upside down, and me a non-swimmer," Carter said.

"You better believe I had a few choice words to say, but I don't think you can print them."

Rescue personnel eventually got Carter and crew members Larry Reeve, 20, and George Norberg, 50, safely to Tofino Hospital where they were examined and then flown here.

None of the men was injured.

UBC clerks set to strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Clerical and library employees at the University of B.C. served 72-hour strike notice Tuesday and said they were asking government mediator Jock Waterston to report out of their contract dispute.

The move followed a meeting of the Association of University and College Employees at which members voted more than 90 per cent to reject the university's last offer of a 10.93-per-cent increase in a one-year contract, plus a $100 signing bonus.

AUCE secretary-treasurer Ray Galbraith said the union is willing to continue bargaining to forestall strike action but no meetings are scheduled.

Escaper charged

AGASSIZ (CP) — Kirk McLaren McIlvride, 31, who escaped from the Mountain Prison here on Sunday, was charged Tuesday with second-degree murder in the death of an Agassiz man.

Police said Malcolm Nelson, 43, was killed Monday during a fight with a man who then fled in Nelson's car.

A member of the highway patrol gave chase and the car was stopped at a roadblock about 120 kilometres east of Vancouver.

Swiss police at UBC

VANCOUVER (CP) — Swiss police visited here to question associates of Betty Joy Belshaw, who was found dead in Switzerland more than two years ago, an RCMP spokesman said Tuesday.

Mrs. Belshaw's husband, Cyril, 57, a University of British Columbia anthropology professor, has been charged with murder and is in jail in Switzerland.

The RCMP spokesman said a detective from Lausanne conducted three days of interviews on the University of B.C. campus last September and two detectives were asking follow-up questions at UBC last week.

Belshaw was extradited from France three months ago at the request of Swiss authorities.

The decomposed body of Mrs. Belshaw, 58, was found encased in plastic beside a Swiss mountain road in March, 1978. She had been reported missing in Paris on Jan. 15, 1978.

Charge of murder

MACKENZIE (CP) — Gordon Dickson, 32, of Mackenzie was charged Tuesday with second-degree murder in the stabbing of a man last week.

Dickson originally was charged with criminal negligence causing bodily harm after Kenneth Pipe, 31, also of Mackenzie, was stabbed during a fight in a trailer court in this central B.C. community last Wednesday.

Pipe died in Prince George hospital on Friday.

Poop 'n scoop bylaw

NANAIMO (CP) — A poop and scoop bylaw requiring dog owners to clean up after their pets was passed by city council Monday.

Pet owners who fail to scoop up their dog's leavings from parks, boulevards or sidwalks would be subject to fines up to $500 and court costs.

The bylaw does not apply to deposits on private property and blind people with seeing eye dogs are exempt.

Dear Sir:

I would like to take this opportunity to both thank and commend you and your staff.

On February 27, I was notified that a vehicle which I had ordered had arrived one month early. This resulted in the need for immediate financing.

The two other financial institutions I normally deal with could not help me for several days. I then remembered your CAN DO campaign and decided to try it.

At 12:30 p.m. I talked to your Loans Officer (Rona) regarding my problem and was assured that it could be solved in less than a day. At 3:45 p.m. my wife and I were in the bank signing the documents and getting our bank draft.

As a result of this excellent service I was able to quickly process all the paper work associated with the vehicle purchase and enjoy it on the weekend.

I will be rearranging my financial affairs in the next few months to reflect the service your bank has provided.

Again, please extend my thanks to Rona for the excellent service.

Yours very truly,

John D. Wolff

Scott-LaSalle hits the skids

MONTREAL (CP) — Financial analysts are still piecing together last month's collapse of Scott-LaSalle Ltd., a pioneer clothing manufacturer that produced the first suit made entirely in Canada.

What they are finding is a textbook bankruptcy and a good example of what may happen to other firms if the current recession is a bad one.

The firm, also a major retailer in Quebec, was big enough to produce the uniforms for Montreal's 1976 Summer Olympics, and it's demise put 1,550 people out of work and left $29.9 million in unpaid debts.

It once helped its principle owners, Montreal's Scott family, maintain homes in exclusive Westmount and Palm Beach, Fla., as well as memberships at the Montefiore Club and the Hillsdale Golf Club here and the Banyon Gold Club in Palm Beach.

While family members refused to comment or could not be reached, former employees, associates and stock analysts painted a bleak picture of the fatal decisions that did the firm in.

Martin Kaufman, retail analyst with Nesbitt Thomson Bongard Inc., was one observer caught off-base by the fall of Scott-LaSalle, which lost $4.5 million in 1979 on sales of $69 million.

Kaufman — who gave the firm a coveted "buy" recommendation in 1977 when its shares traded in the $1.50 to $2.25 range — said in an interview the company failed to keep pace with marketing trends.

"A concept favorable in the 1950s and 1960s simply fell out of bed in the 1970s," he said.

The original idea was to offer low prices to middle-class dwellers of suburbs where Scott-LaSalle stores — operated by LaSalle Factories Ltd.— were located. But as people grew more affluent in the 1970s, they demanded better merchandise and a pleasant shopping environment.

Scott-LaSalle didn't keep pace. Cheap merchandise combined with the poor locations, poor service and unpleasant surroundings of its retail outlets to do the firm in.

Sears, Cardinal, Consumers Distributing, Woolco, Miracle-Mart, the Bay and Simpson's began to expand aggressively into the suburbs, and unlike LaSalle, which usually occupied a free-standing store or one adjoining a strip of shops, these other retail chains located in large shopping malls, he said.

In addition, Scott-LaSalle's rivals offered catalogue services and abundant sales personnel, Kaufman said, adding that the population was not growing fast enough to support all firms in the discount field.

"For every retailer that benefitted, someone had to lose" and Scott-LaSalle was the loser, he said.

Scott-LaSalle tried to upgrade stores owned by its various subsidiaries, but the company's management made some poor decisions. It shouldn't have expanded into downtown Quebec City because the rent was too high and there wasn't enough buyer traffic, said Kaufman.

One subsidiary, Publix Department Stores Ltd., was formed in 1977 to operate mini-department stores, but the experiment turned sour.

Although Scott-LaSalle had stronger working capital in 1977 than others in the same field, a slowdown in the economy, a strike in 1978 and an ill-timed increase in the company's floor space helped to seal the firm's fate. "You could say management was late," Kaufman said.

When Scott-LaSalle folded, it left behind a string of companies in the clothing field that it either created or bought.

It set up Scott Philips Square Corp. in 1948, LaSalle Clothes (Canada) Ltd. in 1952, Samuel M. Ogulnick Ltd. in 1956, LaSalle Factories Ltd. in 1957, Jes Applegath Inc. in 1958 and Geo. E. Preston and Sons Ltd. in 1959.

The firm also acquired Stanley and Bosworth Ltd. in 1957, Student Brand Clothes Inc., Peck Clothing Co. Ltd. and Bond Clothes Shops Ltd., all in 1961, Allied Fashions Ltd. in 1970, English and Scotch Woolen Co. Ltd. in 1971, English and Scotch Uniform Co. in 1972 and McEwen Uniforms (Canada) Ltd. in 1978.

Bank's stock has rosy future

By LAWRENCE MOULE
The Canadian Press

The outlook for bank stocks has finally improved and the Bank of Montreal will be one of the best performers among them in the coming months, an analyst with Richardson Securities of Canada says.

John Cheyne said in an interview from his Winnipeg office that the Bank of Montreal's per-share growth in earnings should approach almost 30 per cent over the next two years.

Cheyne forecast the bank's earnings will be $5.10 a share in 1980 and $5.80 to $5.90 in 1981, compared with $4.71 last year.

Second-quarter results, due out at the end of May, should show good improvement over those of 1979, he said. In the first quarter, the Bank of Montreal's earnings were $1.27 a share compared with $1.22 in the previous first quarter.

"Like other banks, earnings were up only marginally in the first quarter because of high interest rates and the squeeze on their money costs."

The pressure began easing in mid-March, when the federal government established a floating rate for the Bank of Canada's loans, a key indicator in money markets.

That removed political considerations from setting bank rates and "enabled banks to move up their prime rates in line with money costs, which had been going up faster than banks had been able to improve their yield on loans."

With money costs now declining, better profit margins are in the offing for banks and bank stocks will take over market leadership as the year progresses.

Shareholders of the Bank of Montreal have already benefitted from the brightened picture. On April 22, the bank raised its annual dividend rate to $1.52 from $1.48.

Cheyne said he expects the growth in dividends will match the per-share earnings growth rate of 30 per cent over the next two years.

He said the Bank of Montreal now is enjoying the effects of management decisions made several years ago, including the introduction of a sophisticated computer system which enables it to introduce new products in advance of its competition.

Innovations such as a daily interest savings account and an interest-bearing savings account on which cheques can be cashed are helping to increase the bank's share of the market in loans and deposits.

"You will see a lot more over the next two years. There will be a greater amount of product differentiation among banks and the Bank of Montreal will certainly be one of the leaders."

It is also the best capitalized of banks in Canada, having raised $164 million through a one-for-seven rights issue which expired March 31. He said he expects no more rights issues in the near future, meaning the bank's share will not be diluted.

Island lumber mill hurt by markets

By AL FORREST

Doman Industries Ltd. of Duncan may have to reduce lumber production in the second half of this year unless markets improve, company president Herb Doman said Tuesday.

Net income totalled only $1,278,000 or 19 cents per share in the first quarter of the year, down 51 per cent from $2,548,000 or 39 cents per share in the same period of 1979, he told the company's annual meeting.

Sales in the first quarter totalled $28.6 million, up from $23.1 million.

Doman said employees may face longer-than-normal holidays this summer and production might be curtailed in the third quarter unless markets improve.

The long-term outlook remains good, he said, but high mortgage interest rates had reduced construction across North America and lumber markets are soft.

A demand for housing exists but there is little activity because of tight money policies in the U.S.

"When financial conditions ease, there will be an explosive demand for lumber."

Builders are waiting for the U.S. mortgage interest rate to come down below 15 per cent.

He said the company had to sell large quantities of lumber at unsatisfactory prices in the first quarter in order to reduce inventories and be in a better position to ride out the storm.

He remains optimistic, however, that business could pick up later this year and said the company will be in a good position to sell lumber when conditions improve.

He noted that interest rates below the border are already on the way down.

The company's new Duke Point lumber mill near Nanaimo is almost completed and it could be ready to begin operations as early as July.

Markets had been strong during most of 1979 but began to slide in the final three months of the year.

The outlook for 1980 was for weak markets during the first six months. The level of interest rates would be a major factor on markets during the second half of the year.

Doman Industries had a cash flow from operations of $2,669,000 in the first quarter of this year, down from $3,406,000 in the same period last year.

This represents a cash flow of 40 cents per share, down from 52 cents per share.

Hewitt downplays broiler report

Any changes to the B.C. Broiler Marketing Board will have to have full producer participation, Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt said Tuesday.

Hewitt said release of a confidential B.C. Marketing Board document proposing wholesale changes to the broiler board has caused a tremendous amount of unwarranted uproar.

Changes to the chicken scheme recommended by the five-member Social Credit-appointed board which oversees operations of B.C.'s 12 marketing boards include:

—Removal of the right of the 200 broiler producers to elect their marketing board members;

—A change in voting so a minority group of broiler-egg producers — about 15 per cent of the all farmers under the broiler scheme — have a 50-per-cent say in industry matters;

—Creation of a five-member management group appointed by the producers, and;

—Creation of a position of paid president appointed for two-year terms and safe from removal by both the appointed board of directors or the producers.

Producers say the changes would result in a system dominated by bureaucrats and political appointees.

"There have been some complaints with regards to the B.C. Broiler Marketing Board being too closed and not enough opportunity for producer input and the B.C. Marketing Board is reacting to those complaints," Hewitt said.

"They have had meetings with both the broiler association and the broiler breeder association and with the marketing board itself and presented the proposals, which was basically in confidence and was just a proposal."

Hewitt, who said he saw the proposals for the first time Monday night, said he did not accept them.

"I think that we have to look now at what possible approach can be taken to resolve the issues that have been raised."

Some producers say the proposed changes are part of an over-all government plan to put more control in the hands of the B.C. Marketing Board and subvert the powers of individual commodity boards.

Hewitt said he takes exception to those comments.

"I've felt strongly all along that marketing boards have a role to play in the agricultural community."

B.C.Steamship officers reach tentative pact

The B.C.Steamship Corp. has reached a tentative contract agreement with its licensed ferry officers.

No details of the one-year contract will be released until a ratification vote, likely to take place about the middle of May.

The Canadian Merchant Service Guild is recommending acceptance of the contract, covering 14 officers operating the Queen of Prince Rupert on its run between Victoria and Seattle.

The union said negotiations are continuing in an effort to reach a settlement for licensed officers on CP Rail ferries following a tentative agreement late last week.

Seaman plucked from vessel

It was first believed that Michael Minkler, 20, had suffered a broken arm and dislocated shoulder.

He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital in Comox where it was determined he was not seriously injured.

Beer gardens galore in city this summer

There will be beer gardens galore in Victoria this summer.

So far, there it appears that five organizations will get city approval to hold beer gardens in the city, mostly in connection with sports events.

Two more were vetted by city council's parks committee on Tuesday, the Ingraham-Rodeway Fastball Club for May 17-19 and the Stuffy McGinnis Softball League Aug. 2-4.

Both groups will stage the beer gardens in connection with their annual tournaments at Central Park.

"In the past we have not experienced any problems and do not anticipate any at these tournaments, provided the beer gardens are closed for a period of 1½ hours at supper time," parks administrator Al Smith told council.

Council has already granted permission for two other beer gardens:

— Heywood Avenue Softball League, which stages its games on the diamond in the northeast corner of Beacon Hill Park, for May 24 and 25.

Still pending is an application by Victoria Highland Games organizers to hold a beerfest in McDonald Park in James Bay May 17 and 18.

Province backs sex education

The Victoria School District will get help from the B.C. education ministry in developing a new sex education program, says Education Minister Brian Smith.

Smith, who believes such programs are a local responsibility, said Tuesday it's a good idea for his ministry to work with the Victoria board in developing a new approach to teaching human sexuality. Smith said he wants some input into the program design.

A new program that goes beyond the popular concept of instruction and counselling was endorsed Monday by Greater Victoria trustees.

After lengthy discussion the board passed trustee Mark Fisher's motion directing administrators to draw up a package of course material aimed at Grades 8-11.

Currently, the district employs two teachers who give from two to three hours a year instruction to students in grades 8-10.

Smith rejected a suggestion by one trustee that the finished program be made available to other school districts. He said it's ministry policy not to prescribe sex-education courses.

No tenders called on $4M unit: Levi

The Crown corporation which does the provincial government's computer work has acquired a new and expensive computer without putting the contract out to tender, NDP critic Norman Levi charged Tuesday.

He said the B.C. Systems Corp. has signed a $4-million lease with IBM for a second 30-33 computer unit to work in tandem with the one it already has.

But he said other units, notably the ones produced by Amdahl Corp., would be equally compatible with the existing IBM unit and cost about $1 million less for the same lease.

Levi also said the new unit will provide about 75 per cent more computer capacity and he asked if this means the BCSC plans to take more business away from the private sector.

In this case, he said, the private sector can provide certain services far cheaper than BCSC can provide for itself.

"The Crown corporation is operating on a cost basis anywhere between 10 and 50 per cent higher than the private sector, depending on the kind of work that is being done," Levi said.

"This corporation was established to do effective, economical work.

"I'm not suggesting for one minute that we do away with the BCSC but there has to be a balance. Some of the work has to go to the private sector, particularly if it's cheaper."

78 B.C. wiretaps last year: Williams

In 1978, police reported 133 cases of electronic surveillance.

The statistics are contained in the annual report on the Protection of Privacy Provisions of the Criminal Code, tabled in the legislature Tuesday by Attorney-General Allan Williams.

However the figures pertain only to cases falling under provincial jurisdiction.

Cases involving narcotics and other offences under federal jurisdiction are covered in reports tabled in the House of Commons in Ottawa.

Cases covered in the provincial report generally involve murder, theft, possession of property obtained by crime, criminal fraud, arson and criminal conspiracy.

The report says wiretap authorizations in the province likely will stabilize and range between 75 and 100 every year.

Every police application for a wiretap authorization in B.C. last year was approved.

That demonstrates the care taken in making such applications, Williams said.

To obtain permission from the courts for intercepting private communications, police must satisfy a judge that the nature of the crime warrants such interception and that all other investigative procedures have been tried and exhausted.

Before the applications are presented, they must be approved by a supervising police officer and the supporting evidence must be reviewed and approved by Crown counsel.

Princess Alexandra arrives

Princess Alexandra was greeted by provincial and civic officials when she arrived here Tuesday from Toronto for a five-day visit to Vancouver Island.

The princess, colonel-in-chief of the Canadian Scottish Regiment, was welcomed by the regimental march Blue Bonnets.

Tonight she will attend an official reception and dinner given by Lt.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving for the officers of the Canadian Scottish Regiment.

Also planned is a visit to the legislature, a trip to Nanaimo and a Government House reception given by Premier Bill Bennett.

On Friday, the Princess will attend a civic luncheon at the Empress Hotel here and tour the provincial museum's native Indian and natural history galleries.

She will inspect the Canadian Scottish Regiment and attend a regimental lunch at Work Point barracks on Saturday.

Queries for Gulf Islanders

Fixed link fancier Dr. Pat McGeer — he envisions a bridge cum tunnel between Vancouver Island and the mainland — has little sympathy for members of the Islands Trust who say the Gulf Islands should secede rather than allow such a project to ruin their quality of life.

"Some people want to get their own little rabbit patch and hang on to it all for themselves," the science minister said Tuesday.

"There is a definite lifestyle to the Gulf Islands which is very much to be commended and respected.

"On the other hand, the government is expected to pay very heavy subsidies to provide services to the islands and that has to be weighed against the idyllic lifestyle."

McGeer had some pertinent questions.

"Would they set up an independent country? Would they join the United Nations? Would they have their own defence forces? I'd like to know the details of the proposal."

Always ready to help, the minister suggested an independent Gulf Islands Republic might look to some of the tiny European nations for a model.

"Of course we wouldn't like to see them go. But I suppose Liechtenstein and Monte Carlo exist as separate states. These places set up special banking laws and gambling and other kinds of activities to finance themselves.

"I don't know if the people of the Gulf Islands have dreams of that sort in mind in their secession plans."

B.C. College, Institutes Act 'polished'

An amendment to the College and Provincial Institutes Act will increase the number of government appointees on college boards to one greater than the number of school board appointees, Education Minister Brian Smith said Tuesday.

Smith said the change reflects the fact that the provincial government now provides 100 per cent of the funds for community colleges.

"Considering that, we felt that the government should have over-riding responsibility."

The changes also limit to one year the term a board member, appointed by the school district, will serve. Board members appointed by the minister will serve for up to two years.

The amendment was one of a number of housekeeping improvements to the act introduced in the legislature Monday by Smith.

"Two years of experience has shown that the Act requires refining and polishing to ensure that our 14 community colleges and six provincial institutes can continue to meet the educational needs of British Columbians," he said.

Other amendments were also made/

Delays threat to coal deal

The federal government should stop dragging its feet on coal deals with Japan or risk losing contracts to China and Australia, Industry Minister Don Phillips said Tuesday.

Phillips said officials in his ministry are negotiating with the federal government and Japanese companies but refused to disclose details.

"But we've got to make some decisions or the federal government's got to make some decisions or we could lose it," he said.

A senior Japanese foreign ministry official has warned the Canadian coal industry to get moving it if wants a share of the fast-growing Japanese markets.

Japanese importers are well advanced in talks with Australia and moving ahead in discussions with the United States, China and South Africa, Masao Kawai, a deputy director of the ministry, said in an interview.

"The talks with Canadians are the most delayed," he said.

Phillips, who met with some Japanese steel executives last week, said negotiations are going well for the sale of metalurgical coal used in making steel.

He was reluctant to comment on rumors that a deal is imminent and that it would involve between five and eight million tons a year.

The federal government announcement Monday on financing for new port facilities at Prince Rupert to handle coal deposits in northeastern B.C. is expected to speed up those negotiations.

Time-sharing ownership arrives here along with a legal fight over one word

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Time-sharing or condominium interval ownership — they call it condominiums by the slice — has come to Victoria.

It involves a townhouse project on the Esquimalt border and if the developer can clear a legal hurdle, there will be several dozen owners making use of the five units over the space of a year.

It has been held up by the city in a legal fight over interpretation of a word in a land-use contract. B.C. Supreme Court will be asked to settle it.

Verlaan Industries of Vancouver wants to market five townhouses at 723 Sea Terrace in four-week segments, mainly to Prairie residents and Americans.

In Florida, Hawaii and other sunny resort destinations the practice is widespread.

But city council's land management committee voted Tuesday to oppose the project, unlike neighboring Esquimalt.

The project straddles the municipal boundary, with two units in Esquimalt and three in Victoria. Esquimalt originally agreed with Victoria, then reversed itself and said it had no objections.

Ald. Bob Wright said time-sharing is just another name for a hotel and he is against Sea Terrace Villas being sold on that basis because it is in a residential area.

The development is next to Barnard Park on the harbor and overlooks West Bay. The neighborhood is a mixture of highrise apartments, condominium townhouses and single-family houses of varying quality.

Wright said council's Advisory Planning Commission is going to study time-sharing and will report to council in three or four months with recommendations on where such developments should be allowed in the city.

If time-sharing is allowed in residential neighborhoods, then the city is opening itself up to quasi-hotel businesses everywhere, Wright said.

Sea Terrace Villas time-sharing project is the first of its kind in Victoria or Vancouver, although there are several elsewhere in B.C. — at Whistler Mountain ski resort, Fairmont Hot Springs, Shuswap Lake and the 108 Mile Ranch — and in Ontario and Alberta.

The St. Ives condominium townhouse development at Shuswap, 110 kilometres northeast of Kamloops, was the first in the country.

Paxon Marketing Corp. of Victoria has planned a major sales pitch for Sea Terrace Villas in Alberta and Saskatchewan and the U.S., aimed at Prairie people who traditionally winter in the city.

But none of the time-shares can be sold until the developer gets an amendment to the original land-use contract under which the townhouses were built last year.

They were to be conventional condominium townhouses, but they didn't move and the original builder sold the project to Verlaan which adopted the time-share plan. The land-use contract specifically forbids transient accommodation.

Lawyer Ellis Achtem told the committee the company's interpretation of that clause is that time-sharing is not considered a transient use because the people living there will be the owners.

He said the project is a high-class development, with $30,000 spent on furnishing each townhouse. The owners won't put pressures on the municipality for such services as schools, but they will be paying taxes, he added.

Because land-use contracts have been eliminated by the provincial government since the Sea Terrace Villas were built, the owners must go to the B.C. Supreme Court to have the document altered.

Patrick Wemyss of Paxon, director of marketing for the project, said in an interview the cost of the time-shares is not yet final because all expenses are not in yet. Until the legal battle is settled, nobody will buy.

He estimated the time-shares will cost between $4,500 and $6,500 per week with buyers having to take a minimum of four weeks.

On top of that will be a maintenance fee of $125 per week of occupancy. Wemyss said there have been about 100 inquiries about purchasing.

"They're popular because they lock the cost of going on vacation," said Wemyss.

Owners will leave and check in at Sea Terrace Villas on a Saturday. The units have to be vacated by 10 a.m. and the next time-sharer may take over at 4 p.m. In the intervening six hours, the townhouse is readied for the next occupants.

Wemyss said they will find enough food in the refrigerator for a meal that night and the liquor cabinet will be stocked with their favorite beverages.

Maid service is provided once a week for the fully-furnished units. They come complete with dishes, cutlery and placemats, even records for the stereo and current magazines.

The company calls them "limited edition second homes" which will appeal to a lot of residents of Tabor or Vegreville, Alberta.

If the idea of spending the same four weeks every year in Victoria doesn't appeal, then the one-twelfth owner can barter his time-share for somebody else's at a ski resort or near Disneyworld in Florida or the 108 Mile Ranch in the Cariboo.

There are several organizations with exchange listings available for an annual membership fee plus a charge when an exchange is set up.

Princess in waiting . . . for action by Victoria

The Princess Marguerite, a fixture of the Victoria waterfront for 30 years or more, is gone.

The Maggie was towed out of the harbor Tuesday to Burrard-Yarrows shipyard in Esquimalt harbor where she will be put into mothballs until the government decides on her final disposition.

Transportation Minister Alex Fraser said the aging ferry had to be moved so the dock could undergo the minor changes needed to accommodate the ferry-cum-hydrofoil service that will replace her.

What happens to the Marguerite now?

The government has said she will never be put back into service but other than that, no decision has been made.

"The only offer that I'm aware of is what the premier made to the people of Victoria — that they could have it for a floating museum. But I'm not aware of any response to that offer," Fraser said.

Broadmead centre approved

The 6-3 vote to allow The Bay and Broadmead Farms Ltd. to construct a 174,000-square-foot shopping centre in Royal Oak comes less than a week after council approved doubling the size of the planned Tillicum shopping centre.

Council approved rezoning the 16-acre Broadmead Village site between Royal Oak Avenue and Royal Oak Drive after a four-hour public hearing.

The Bay and Broadmead will start construction of the $12-million development this summer and it will be completed in the spring of 1981.

Saanich is now fighting an injunction preventing it from issuing building permits to developers Cal Investments Ltd. for the 495,000-square-foot Tillicum project.

A number of residents at the public hearing said the Broadmead development is unnecessary.

The residents also said it will harm property values and the environment and create traffic problems.

The Broadmead plan also violates the official community plan for the area, which designates the property residential.

Broadmead Ratepayers Association representative Christopher Dubetz told aldermen there is no guarantee the shopping development, which will include The Bay, a supermarket and a number of small specialty stores, will not be expanded in future.

But company spokesman Merv Mawson indicated the development, in the planning stages since 1970, will remain the same size.

Mawson promised Ald. John Mika the company will agree to a restrictive covenant limiting the size of the centre to 174,000 square feet.

Mika pointed out Saanich has approved a total of 913,000 square feet of commercial development during the past week, more than the combined floor space of both Mayfair and Hillside malls.

However, Mika said he would vote in favor of the rezoning if a restrictive covenant was put in place.

Ald. Robert Cameron, Irene Block and Howard Sturrock voted against the rezoning.

Cameron said it will encourage population growth to take place in the direction of Central Saanich and peninsula farmland.

Block said she is concerned Royal Oak merchants will suffer from a large commercial development next door.

Sturrock said the development is too large for the needs of the community.

A motion by Mika to delay rezoning until a May 7 neighborhood planning meeting called by Royal Oak residents was defeated 5-4.

Police study centralizing of services

By NORMAN GIDNEY

The five Victoria-area municipalities with their own police forces have begun talks on the possibility of a partial amalgamation of services, Mayor Bill Tindall disclosed today.

Mayors and police chiefs of Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Central Saanich met Tuesday for several hours to discuss the issue, Tindall said, and another meeting will be held within 10 days.

He didn't use the word amalgamation to describe the municipalities' aim, but referred to centralizing certain police functions.

A central records section and a common dispatch office headed the list of items discussed, Tindall told the Victoria police board.

Also on the agenda were a 911 emergency telephone number, central identification section, a common dog squad, police lockup, major crime investigation unit, central purchasing and a lie detector unit.

There was no agreement on details at the meeting, but Tindall said there is a sense of urgency. Saanich is considering a new police building and wants a decision soon on centralization.

Tindall said the mayors — acting as chairman of their police boards — agreed there would be very little savings made by centralizing police functions, but it would improve efficiency and service.

The municipalities' next step will be for administrative steps to put together figures on costs and find out what part the provincial government will play in the centralization process.

The mayor said the municipalities expect some provincial contribution towards the cost, much as the government now helps fund municipal policing in towns and cities without their own forces.

In communities of a certain size, B.C. pays all the cost of bringing in an RCMP detachment. Larger towns pay a share of the RCMP cost, but the province still contributes a significant amount.

The five Victoria-area municipalities pay all the bills connected with their municipal forces. The city of Victoria's taxpayers this year will pay more than $4 million for their 160-man force.

Tindall indicated that centralization would probably help the smaller forces most. For example, he said that Esquimalt, Central Saanich and Oak Bay have limited resources for detective work.

A central major crimes unit, with officers seconded from all the departments, would work on serious crimes in the five municipalities, much like the special Joint Forces Operations now work. JFO handles mostly drug cases and is composed of the municipal police forces and the RCMP.

Tindall said the mayors and chiefs are acting now because of concern at the lack of action on a year-old report to the B.C. Police Commission, a section of which suggested that the Victoria municipalities study unification of their police departments.

In a related development, Victoria chief William Snowdon told the police board that area chiefs have decided to establish regular monthly meetings to discuss areas of common concern.

The five municipal chiefs — Snowdon, Saanich's Bob Peterson, Irv Bailey of Oak Bay, Bob Miles of Central Saanich and Art Burton of Esquimalt — have agreed to meet the third Wednesday of every month. The first one will be May 21 at Victoria police station, Snowdon said.

"The purpose was to discuss over-all where we can act in unison to help each other in certain areas," he said.

Show and go time

Customized, modified, restored, funny, classic, off-the-road . . . you name it and that kind of car, truck, van or motorcycle will probably be at the third annual International Autorama opening Friday at Memorial Arena and the adjacent curling rink.

Competing with the million-dollar-plus display of show and go chrome, steel and rubber for attention will be such celebrities as Willie Mosconi, pool player par excellence.

Who could possibly best Willie for everyone's attention? The younger set might be more interested in Spiderman. The Marvel Comics' character will be around to sign autographs Saturday and Sunday.

The show will also feature displays, contests and continuous showings of the movie American Graffiti.

The 600-horsepower car has an antique pool table mounted on the back. It's billed as the fastest pool table in the world and Mosconi should love it if he can figure out where to stand.

A turbo-charged, 74-inch Harley-Davidson, owned by Syd DeSoto and recently judged the best two-wheeled vehicle in North America, will be on hand, along with Magic Pan, a gold-plated bike from California.

The show is open 6 to 11 p.m. Friday, noon to 11 p.m. Saturday and noon to 10 p.m. Sunday.

The show is one of 200 such international events sanctioned annually in North America by the International Show Car Association.

Bureaucrats block care unit for Chinatown

Senior civil servants in the health ministry are blocking the proposed Chinatown extended care facility, Ald. Bob Wright charged Tuesday.

He told council's land-use planning committee that the department officials feel the project is to be a commitment to only one sector of the community, Victoria's elderly Chinese.

They also have concerns about the small site, where the old Chinese hospital was located at 550 Herald. For the planned 50 beds, a new hospital on this property would have to be three storeys high.

"In other words, the senior officials are against this," said Wright.

Ald. Bill McElroy said his sources in the health ministry and Canada Mortgage and Housing Corp., which will help finance the project, told him the problems are too many beds and not enough green space.

Wright said the Chinese extended care project needs special consideration because it is in the heart of Chinatown and to provide an acre of grass around the building would destroy what the city and property owners are trying to save along Fisgard.

He got the committee to back his proposal that Mayor Bill Tindall write to Health Minister Rafe Mair asking him to get the project going again.

McElroy thought the red tape could be unravelled by a meeting of people in the health ministry, the Capital Regional District, the Chinese community and the city.

"We'll have that too," said Wright.

The sponsoring Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association is planning to send a delegation to Mair to ask that the hospital project be given the go-ahead. The CRD's hospital planning commission has already endorsed the plans.

Sin of omission brings unanimous guilty verdict

CHEMAINUS — Communicide is a nasty crime — but there it was in black and white.

Prosecutor Barry Luff handed Judge Gerry Phillippson the full-page map from Explore Beautiful Vancouver Island and addressed witness Mrs. William Grant:

"Have you ever known the town of Chemainus to have left its present location south, to a point north of Ladysmith — and to your knowledge, has the village of Crofton ever vanished from the place it now occupies?"

"Certainly not," said the witness, a Crofton motel owner and member of the Chemainus-Crofton Chamber of Commerce which Tuesday night put on trial the Victoria Times and Daily Colonist on charges of abducting Chemainus and the communicide of Crofton in their 195,000-run tourist supplement distributed recently over the Island and in Vancouver and Calgary.

On the map, by cartoonist Nelson Dewey, Chemainus had clearly moved and Crofton was no where to be found.

On trial were the two dailies, Dewey, Times managing editor Gordon Bell and supplement editor Lon Wood who handled the defence.

Holding up a similar Dewey map — only featuring the Chemainus-Crofton hamlets in large letters, Wood launched his defence with a claim that the "right" map had been switched by the Mt. Prevost Volleyball and Light Refreshment Society — a.k.a. The Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce.

"Our view and coverage has always been wholehearted and accurate," he said, holding up copies of both dailies featuring banner headlines such as "Crofton raises prime rate 1.2%," "All B.C. votes on Crofton link" and "Crofton crisis almost over."

"Besides," he added, "any town that boasts tennis and toilets can't be all that bad."

The verdict was "guilty" and punishment was that in future issues of the supplement, due recognition shall be given to Crofton and Chamainus and the whole Chemainus Valley.

Home is wherever the Stars find it

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Since the National Hockey League playoffs began, Minnesota North Stars have found a home-away-from-home in the rink of any team they visit.

In the preliminary round, they completed a three-game sweep of Toronto in Maple Leaf Gardens. In the quarter-finals, they finished the defending champion Canadiens in the seventh game Sunday at the Montreal Forum after winning two earlier playoff games there.

Tuesday night in the Spectrum, where the regular-season champion Flyers had lost only five of 45 games this season, the North Stars held on for a wild 6-5 triumph in the opener of their semi-final series.

But it was not always so, as Minnesota coach Glen Sonmor was quick to point out after North Stars left winger Steve Christoff had set a record for most playoff goals by a rookie (eight) and the teams had combined to set another standard by scoring five goals in a 3:20 span of the first period.

Earlier this season, when the North Stars had won only five of their first 21 road games, Sonmor asked each of his players why the team fared so poorly on foreign ice.

"I found I was hearing the same phrases from every player: we were too tense, not aggressive enough, we were sitting back too much, we were playing without enthusiasm," said Sonmor.

"I met with the players and said, 'These are your words, not mine. Now we've got to do something about it. We may not be rewarded immediately, but it will come.'"

It has. The North Stars finished with 11 road victories, 20 losses and nine ties. In the playoffs, they have won five of their six contests away from the Met Centre.

Before Tuesday's game, Sonmor said: "We decided to let them know immediately they're not going to intimidate us — that we were going to have as many good, authoritative takeouts as they would.

"We went out right away and let them know we weren't going to back down one bit."

The strategy worked. Christoff scored the first of his two goals just 4:19 into the contest, and after Al Hill tied it at 5:23 with a power-play goal that ended a string of 23 consecutive Philadelphia failures with a man advantage, defenceman Paul Shmyr made it 2-1.

Shmyr started a scoring spree that saw the teams erase the mark for quickest five goals in a playoff game, a record that had stood since the Maple Leafs and New York Rangers scored five in 4:19 on April 9, 1932.

"For two periods, we weren't a very good hockey team," said Flyers coach Pat Quinn. "They did the banging, we didn't.

"For two periods, we stood and watched them play hockey."

Christoff became the leading rookie goal-scorer in playoff history by sending his eighth of the post-season past Peeters at 13:59 — just 39 seconds after Shmyr scored. That broke a tie the U.S. Olympian had gained with Jacques Lemaire of Montreal (1968), Danny Gare of Buffalo (1975) and Don Maloney of the Rangers (1979).

BETTER THINGS to look at have apparently been found by New York's Wayne Merrick (11) as he ignores action behind him during National Hockey League playoff game Tuesday while Danny Gare (18), Jim Schoenfeld and Derek Smith of Buffalo Sabres keep attention on puck after save by goalie Don Edwards. Merrick and other Islanders paid enough attention to National Hockey League playoff chores to defeat Sabres 4-1 at Buffalo in opening game of semi-final series. (AP laserphoto)

The dentist behind Sims

NEW YORK — In a time when sports history occurs in courtrooms almost as often as in arenas, sooner or later somebody is going to test the judicial validity of the National Football League draft. And after his client, Billy Sims, was selected by the Detroit Lions Tuesday as the very first choice in this year's stock show, a retired Houston dentist named Jerry Argovitz implied that it might be sooner than later.

"Are you thinking of challenging the draft?" Argovitz was asked.

"No comment," replied the agent.

"In that case," somebody said, "has it crossed your mind?"

"It has more than crossed my mind," Argovitz said.

Downstairs, in the ballroom of the New York Sheraton, the first round was progressing. But on the lobby level, in a meeting room where Sims had just held a news conference, his 41-year-old agent was fuming about the "total monopoly" of the NFL draft than enables the 28 teams to pick their players, rather than permitting hundreds of players to pick their teams.

"No one can fight the system by himself," Argovitz said. "But if some agents were to band together and orchestrate it, then it could happen. And it's going to happen."

Such strong words might merely be a ploy in Argovitz's negotiations with Russ Thomas, the Lions' general manager. If the Lions increase their offer and Sims signs, Argovitz might decide to put down his sword as a crusader. Then again he might not.

"I've never seen anything in America operated like this," he said. "Owning a man's rights like this."

Argovitz is representing a special man — two-time All-America at Oklahoma, winner of the Heisman Trophy as a junior, a 6-foot, 215-pound running back who galloped for 3,813 yards and 50 touchdowns in his colllege career with an average gain of more than seven yards. In the "player profiles" handed out by the NFL Tuesday, Sims was accorded more than a page of copy, including 36 lines of honors and awards.

"Complete package," the NFL scouting report read. "Speedy, innate runner with superior cutting ability ... consistently made the first defender miss ... explodes through holes, bounces off tacklers ... great balance-body control ... super acceleration-leg spring ... fearless blocker ... pass-receiving possibilities were not explored at Oklahoma."

The only question about Sims seems to be his age. He will be 25 in September, old for a rookie some scouts think. Other scouts like the maturity factor. But if Earl Campbell of the Houston Oilers and Ottis James Anderson can make it big as a rookie running back, Sims can too. Unlike quarterbacks, good running backs do not need much time to develop. They don't have to read defenses. They just let their instincts take over. For the good ones, that's enough.

"But if we don't reach a contract agreement by May 21," Argovitz said, "I will show the embarrassing numbers."

But he recently disclosed those numbers in the Lions offer — a $300,000 bonus, a three-year contract at $100,000 annually, the Lions' option for a fourth year at a $110,000 salary. That adds up to a $710,000 package.

"Pete Rose makes more money in one year," Argovitz acknowledged Tuesday, referring to the Phillies' first baseman with an $800,000 contract, "than the Lions are offering Billy Sims for his career."

In contrast, Argovitz has reportedly been asking for about a $3 million package over four years.

If we don't sign with the Lions," said Argovitz, "our options are not very good — sit out a year and go back into the draft next year or go to the Canadian League. Saskatchewan has our rights up there."

Although the Lions also could trade their negotiation rights to Sims to another NFL team, Argovitz believes that Thomas arranged for the Saskatchewan team to name him, saying, "I'd like to see copies of his phone bill." But if Sims were to go to Canada, he would be the second consecutive No. 1 choice to do that. Tom Cousineau, the Ohio State linebacker taken by the Buffalo Bills last year, signed with the Montreal Alouettes; he now is reported wanting to return to the NFL.

"No way I want to go to Canada and play," Sims said. "I'm ready to go to work for the Detroit Lions, hopefully. They just need an added touch and I believe I'm that added touch."

His agent, meanwhile, seems to be enjoying the controversy. Retired from dentistry in 1973 at age 33 because, as he says, "I'd reached my peak of earning in that profession," he then managed financial investments for doctors and businessmen. Two years ago he told Gene Burrough, the brother of Ken Burrough of the Houston Oilers, that "I could have got Earl Campbell a better contract from the Oilers than he got." Now he represents Ken Burrough and Robert Brazile of the Oilers, Eddie Lee Ivory of the Green Bay Packers and several college players who were in Tuesday's draft, notably Curtis Dickey of Texas A&M, the running back-wide receiver chosen by the Baltimore Colts.

"Negotiating for players," Argovitz said, "is a lot tougher than pulling teeth. But as a dentist, I had a reputation for saving a lot of teeth instead of pulling them. I'll save this situation too."

Bouts with Gray help Clarke collect crown

HALIFAX (CP) — Chris Clarke of Halifax used the experience gained in his two fights with Clyde Gray last year to advantage Tuesday as he took the Canadian middleweight boxing title from Ralph Hollett of Halifax by a unanimous decision.

It was Hollett's first title defence since he won the crown in January from Fernand Marcotte of Quebec City.

The fight marked Clarke's move into the middleweight ranks after outgrowing the welterweight limit.

His main claim to fame before his victory Tuesday night were two battles against Gray last year in which he won the Commonwealth welterweight title in August, then lost it in an October rematch by a knockout.

Sabres blow chances and Islanders cash in

BUFFALO, N.Y. (CP) — Bob Bourne was scared but Buffalo Sabres were stiffed.

"You think they could get two goals — it's scary," Bourne said of a five-minute power play the Sabres received in the first game of their best-of-seven National Hockey League semi-final series Tuesday night against New York Islanders.

However, Bourne, a centre for the Islanders, was the only man to score during the major penalty assessed New York defenceman Gord Lane for spearing Ric Seiling of the Sabres.

The goal was the Islanders' first and led the club to a 4-1 victory, the ninth straight over the Sabres in Stanley Cup competition.

John Tonelli scored twice for the winners and Mike Bossy added the other. Rick Dudley scored for Buffalo to give the Sabres a brief 1-0 lead in the first period.

"Being scared like that was good, though," Bourne said.

Despite having helped the Islanders get the jump on the Sabres heading into the second game of the series here Thursday night, Bourne said it was a poor effort by both teams following long layoff since the quarter-final victories.

"I think the fans probably were disappointed tonight because it wasn't a Stanley Cup game. I think probably it was out worst game of the season. We were sluggish throughout and they were, too, in the first period."

By the third period, the outworked Sabres were disorganized and disheartened, perhaps as much by their poor luck with goal posts and crossbars as by the fact the Islanders checked them into submission.

"Some hit the post and go in and some don't," said New York goaltender Billy Smith, who faced 32 shots.

Smith said his defencemen and penalty-killers played exceptionally well.

"They kept them tied up. After the first few minutes, I think, Buffalo got a little frustrated."

Bossy's goal broke a 1-1 tie at 17:42 of the first period and, like Bourne's goal, was unassisted. Tonelli had the last two goals for New York, his fifth and sixth of the playoffs.

"Last year when I got a chance I'd rush it," Tonelli said. "I was hurrying up and missing my shot.

"I have to take my time."

Islanders coach Al Arbour said the team is "a better hockey club and a tougher hockey club than it was last year."

A year ago, the regular-season champion Islanders were ousted in six games in a semi-finaal against New York Rangers.

"We're better balanced now and we're getting scoring from different lines," Arbour said. "Butch Goring's been a factor.

"He's helped, but it's more than that. We're a tougher hockey club.'

He said the Islanders' defensive efforts stiffled the Sabres.

"We had them bunched up in our end. We'd get a piece of the shot or a piece of the stick. When they got their chances, Smitty was there to stop them."

Arbour's task now is to make the most of the road victory before the series moves to Uniondale, N.Y., Saturday.

Jays are still enjoying view from lofty perch

Times News Services

Toronto Blue Jays are enjoying the view from the top.

"Just another win, keep 'em coming, keep 'em coming" said right fielder Barry Bonnell following Toronto's 3-1 victory Tuesday night over visiting Kansas City Royals.

The win, Toronto's fourth straight, kept the surprising Jays in first place in the American League East Division, one game up on New York Yankees.

Once again the Jays relied on a solid pitching performance from their starter. This time, though, it was Jim Clancy who earned the applause by closing down the Royals on a complete-game six hitter.

The performance was the tall right-hander's first complete game victory in exactly one year. His last occurred April 29, 1979, against Milwaukee Brewers. His last victory was May 4, 1979.

In between were two ankle tendon injuries that kept him out of all but 12 games.

Clancy was in complete control in evening his record at 1-1, scattering six hits including Hal McRae's solo home run in the sixth inning, a deep drive to left.

"I wanted him to go all the way and build up his confidence," said Jays manager Bobby Mattick. "He's a much better pitcher now than ever before in his life.

"We changed his pitching style. We've got him bending over more and he's down in the strike zone more consistently than ever before.

"We've also taken away his forkball. I never liked it. Instead we worked a lot on his change."

Whatever the changes, they worked against the Royals' bats.

Sports tonight

Softball tonight and rugby early Thursday highlight the list of activities for Greater Victoria sports fans.

All softball games start at 6:30.

Saints meet James Bay Inn and Mayfair Insurance squares off with Rebels in Macdonald Men's League action at Macdonald Park.

At Hyacinth Park, Tillicum Shoppers Drug Mart plays Vidalin Contruction and McDonald Furniture Juniors take on Strathcona Stingers in Victoria-Saanich Women's League games.

On Thursday, action begins on four fields at 10 a.m. in the British Columbia high school rugby championship tournament at the University of Victoria.

A filly will test the colts

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — "You wouldn't run a bad filly against colts," trainer Leroy Jolley suggested in the Churchill Downs Stable Tuesday.

But the Jolley-trained Genuine Risk is anything but a bad filly, and on Saturday she will race against colts and a couple of geldings in the Kentucky Derby.

No filly has tried the tough 1¼-mile Derby since Silver Spoon finished fifth in 1959. Only one has won — Regret in 1915.

After Genuine Risk finished third behind Plugged Nickle and Colonel Moran in the 1¼-mile Wood Memorial at Aqueduct April 19, Jolley said he was happy with the performance but that she would skip the Derby and he pointed for the New York filly Triple Crown.

But Bert Firestone — Genuine Risk races in his wife's colors — indicated that the filly would come to the Derby.

"Bert and I have always had a good relationship; we've always kicked things back and forth," Jolley said in New York about the decision to run Genuine Risk in the Derby.

A major reason for Jolley's change of heart, he said Tuesday, was that the size of the Derby field.

"It looked like a mob scene for the Derby," he said.

But instead of 20 starters, as many people were predicting, it looks like the Derby could have as few as 12 starters.

Also after he saw Genuine Risk run third to Derby winter-book favorite Plugged Nickle, beaten by only about 1½ lengths, and after he watched Rockhill Native, the other top Derby challenger, win the Blue Grass Stakes, Jolley figured he had in his barn a legitimate third Derby favorite.

"It happens all the time all around the world," said Jolley about racing fillies against males. "It just doesn't happen in the United States very often."

Jolley has raced a filly against males three times. He sent out What A Summer to win the Fall Highweight Handicap twice and finish second in the Vosburgh Handicap in New York. But those races are sprints and What A Summer was older than three.

"You have to figure it's going to take quite a bit out of her and she probably won't run back for a month," said Jolley, who won the 1975 Kentucky Derby with Foolish Pleasure. The Preakness, the second race of the Triple Crown, is run at Pimlico two weeks after the Derby. The Belmont Stakes, the final Triple Crown race, comes three weeks after the Preakness.

This year, Genuine Risk won a seven-furlong allowance race and a one-mile handicap under 124 pounds before finishing third in the Wood Memorial. Her Derby weight will be 121 pounds against 126 for each of her rivals.

Government sincerity highly questionable

We have to seriously question the sincerity of the provincial government's desire to provide better avenues for public participation in decisions involving the use of our forest lands in light of a recent decision by the Environment and Land Use Committee.

The government cabinet committee has turned down a proposal for improved public involvement in on-going planning and monitoring of the Tsitika watershed management plan.

Right now there is only one public representative — Ed Mankelow of Chemainus — among about 13 government and industry reps on the Tsitika Follow-up Committee (TFC). And, he has to pay his own way.

The proposal, which was solicited by ELUC and subsequently turned down the same outfit in curious timewasting fashion, called for establishment of an advisory council to meet four times a year and select three TFC delegates.

It also asked for the government to provide expenses for council and TFC representatives attending meetings and to provide delagates with an adequate opportunity, through on-site inspections, to assure compliance with the provisions of the Tsitika Watershed Integrated Resource Plan.

Providing public representatives with public funds shouldn't pose too great a problem. After all, we're already paying the way for the government delegates.

When the public groups drew up the proposal at a meeting last October, Mankelow stated that meaningful public participation in the TFC would "probably be simple window dressing unless government and industry agreed to improve public involvement opportunity."

He added that acceptance of the proposal would probably yield a model multiple-use management format which could be applied elsewhere in the province.

The Tsitika was the last untouched watershed on the east coast of Vancouver Island and should have been established as a forest research control area to check the impact of logging development in other similar terrain.

Instead, the provincial government decided in 1977 to lift a moratorium that had been in place since 1973 and release a major portion of the area for logging.

And now, the government has turned down a proposal which might have provided more meaningful public input for the decision-making process.

That's two golden opportunities down the drain.

We notice in the list of research contracts awarded during March that $17,250 has been granted to evaluate use of the Salmonid Enhancement Program educational package.

Further down the list, $3,000 was given out to determine the incidence and intensity of sports fishing in British Columbia tidal waters.

Seems like someone snowed somebody somewhere.

Flyers win Allan Cup

SPOKANE, Wash (CP) — Mike Panteluk scored the winning goal and Ken Stuart added two others as Spokane Flyers edged Cambridge Hornets 4-3 Tuesday night to win the Allan Cup senior hockey championship in four straight games.

Spokane won the Allan Cup in 1970, 1972 and 1976.

Penteluk's game-winning goal broke up an intense, closely-contested game.

Adanacs rate as team to beat in WLA

The 1980 Western Lacrosse Association season opens tonight with the feeling that Coquitlam Adanacs may be ready to shed the bridesmaid's collar that's been hung on them for the past two seasons.

The Adanacs, coached by Bob Salt, have been beaten in the WLA playoffs the last two years by Victoria Shamrocks, who went on to win the Canadian championship last fall with a four-game sweep over Peterborough Red Oaks.

But the Shamrocks aren't the team they were last season, having lost several players from their championship club.

Gone are such stalwarts as Bob Cool, Ivan Thompson, Norm Baker, Dennis Somner, Scott Marshall, Steve Buckley and Ranjit Dillon. The Irish also have a new coach in Joe McCrea who has replaced Bill Munroe.

Coquitlam, meanwhile, has strengthened.

Coquitlam dealt off high-scoring Dave Durante to New Westminster for Mario Govorchin and also got power-shooting Rico Bellusci from Burrards.

Burrards had a dismal 1979 season, but appear to have rebuilt well under second-year coach Bill Bradley.

Burrards also have added rookie John Swan, Bruce Turris and former pro Paul Cioci.

New Westminster Salmonbellies started in a sprint but finished in a trot last year, something coach Al Lewthwaite will try and even out this time around. Rookie Rod Bannister may help in goal, along with the scoring of Durante. The brothers Brian and Bob Tasker add to an offence directed by veteran Wayne Goss.

They also hope to get junior draft choice Tarey Pollock from Nanaimo and many of the players should be in excellent shape after a winter season of field lacrosse.

Nanaimo Timbermen finished in last place last year despite the presence of scoring sensation Brian Evans and outstanding goalkeeper Mac Maude. The Timbermen will also be aided by former Shamrock stars Ron MacNeil, Doug Angrove and Charn Dhillon.

Larry McNabb is back as coach which means there will be aggressive play in the Island city.

Last year's 30-game, unbalanced schedule has been cut back to a balanced, 24-game package — with an added incentive.

The team in first place June 21 will represent the league in the Nations Cup Tournament, beginning in Vancouver July 8.

First league game is tonight with Burrards host to New Westminster.

Power-play pays for senior B stars

All-Stars from the South Island Senior "B" Lacrosse League utilized power-play opportunities to full advantage Tuesday night and came up with a 12-9 victory over Esquimalt Legion of the Western Canada Major Junior League at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Legion, which trailed by period scores of 4-1 and 9-6, took 10 of the 15 minor penalties and the All-Stars came up with five power-play goals.

Dwayne Ferguson and Kevin Kennedy scored two goals each for the All-Stars and singles were contributed by Mark Schoor, Pete McCreesh, Brian Spaven, Frank Alexander, Kim Browning, Mike Beaulac, Owen Richman and Bill Vanbusker.

Dennis Begley, Jerry Lindal and Al Radley shared goaltending duties for the All-Stars and came up with 40 saves while Derek Croucher and Herb Isherwood combined to block 47 shots for Legion.

CHANDLER TRADED

Cornwall fills out Memorial Cup field

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — Dale Hawerchuk fired a pair of goals in the final five minutes to complete a five-point night as Cornwall Royals defeated Sherbrooke Beavers 5-3 Tuesday to capture the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League final 4-2.

The Royals will now represent the QMJHL in the Memorial Cup playoffs to be held in Regina and Brandon from May 4-11.

Regina Pats will be the Western Hockey League representative and defending champion Peterborough Petes will again carry Ontario Major Junior Hockey League colors.

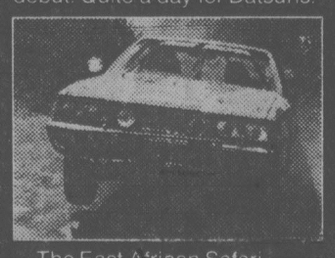
DATSUN WINS. TAKES "TRIPLE CROWN" TWO YEARS IN A ROW.

First. Second. Fourth place. Datsun 510's roar in to take the East African Safari "Triple Crown" for the second consecutive year. Top overall performance. Best in their Group II class. Team honours. And a Datsun 200 SX, privately entered, takes 7th place in its international rally debut. Quite a day for Datsuns.



The East African Safari Rally. Who could conceive 5,511 kilometres better suited to punish and pummel a car—dust, heat, the slippery, slimy roads through Arbendea Forest, the final tortuous leg around Mount Kenya and back to Nairobi? Many of the cars entered couldn't even complete the first leg.

This terrain is that tough. Then, so are Datsuns.

Of the 12 leading overall positions, Datsuns took six. Mercedes Benz Group IV 450's, ranked 3rd, 6th and 10th. Opel Ascona's placed 5th and 9th with a solitary Peugeot surviving to take 11th place.

If you're a Datsun owner, puff out your chest. If you're not, drop in on your Datsun dealer and see what the fuss is all about. Slip behind the wheel of a Datsun 510 or 200 SX and experience a winner. Imagine you're heading out for Mombasa.

P.S. For more autosport action, catch the "Datsun Special" on CTV's Wide World of Sport, June 14th and 21st.

The 510 is known internationally as the Datsun Violet or 160J and the 200SX as the Datsun Sylvia.

Jets causing nightmares

BILLY SIMS

It was an understandable aftershock produced by a trade that delivered Texas wide receiver Johnny (Lam) Jones, an Olympic sprint champion, to New York Jets.

The Jets, who gave two first-round picks to San Francisco 49ers for the No. 2 draft choice, already owned Wesley Walker, one of the league's fastest wide receivers. With Jones working the other side of the field, it may mean nightmares for secondaries trying to contain the New York passing game.

"We're obviously very pleased to have acquired Lam Jones, one of the highest quality players in the draft," said New York coach Walt Michaels. "If we have two guys going like Walker and Jones, it will put tremendous pressure on the opposition defence.

"It gives us depth."

Walker is coming back from knee surgery but Michaels assured listeners that was no consideration in selecting Jones.

"I absolutely guarantee Wesley Walker is all right," he said."

San Francisco had been offering other teams the draft's No. 2 pick, finally settling on the Jets' bid of the No. 13 and No. 20 selections. New York had acquired No. 20 from Denver earlier in a trade of quarterback Matt Robinson to the Broncos.

For their part, the '49ers came away with running back Earl Cooper from Rice and defensive end Jim Stuckey of Clemson. That sat well with Bill Walsh, San Francisco general manager-coach, who negotiated the deal with the Jets. He called Cooper a back with excellent size who also is nimble.

The Jets-'49ers trade was contingent upon Detroit making Oklahoma running back Billy Sims the draft's No. 1 choice. When the Lions did that, the trade for No. 2 was completed.

There had been speculation that Sims's contract demands — reported to be $5 million for six years — would scare off the Lions. But Detroit went ahead and picked Sims, who won the 1978 Heisman and was runner-up last season.

"This is the best football player in the country this year," said Lions coach Monte Clark, who held up a hand-lettered sign reading "We've got Sims."

However, negotiations have been stalemated and Sims seemed cynical about progress.

"I wasn't impressed with Detroit before I went there to visit," he said. "They had a bad record last year (2-14).

"But they just need an added touch, which I believe I am. I'm just waiting for (general manager) Russ Thomas to wake up."

Battle of brothers

Lorne Bowden pitched a four-hitter for Tally-Ho Travelodge but required a seventh-inning rally to defeat younger brother Jim and Seaspray Properties 6-3 in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game Tuesday at Central Park.

Lorne and his clubmates were trailing 3-1 in the fifth inning when Kevin Gilbert smashed a two-run homer off one of Jim's pitches to tie the score.

In the seventh frame, John Martin singled to lead off for Tally-Ho and Gilbert and Dwayne Robinson drew bases on balls before Jim was relieved by Wayne Phillips. Then, Al Goldade cracked a two-run single and Robinson scored on a ground-out by Paul Kraeling to provide the winning margin.

Lorne struck out seven batters and issued only one walk while Jim, making his first appearance in the league, struck out six, walked six and yielded five hits.

In Victoria-Saanich Senior Women's League play at Hyacinth Park, Karen Perkins pushed her pitching record to 3-0 as Tillicum Shoppers Drug Mart nipped New York, New York 2-1 and Victoria Athletics mauled McDonald Furniture Juniors, 13-7.

Yvonne Delong, Joanne Henikes, Kelly Oliver and Cathy Lohr hit singles in the bottom of the seventh inning to produce both Tillicum runs.

At Macdonald Park, Ben Szumack connected for a two-run homer in the bottom of the seventh to lead Coast Projects to a 6-4 decision over Trafalgar Inn and Meg-Power topped Labatts 7-4 in Macdonald Men's League tussles.

Olympic champ joins pro ranks

VADUZ, Liechtenstein (AP) — Hanni Wenzel, who won the World Cup and two gold medals at the Olympics in Lake Placid, became a professional skier Tuesday.

The Liechtenstein Ski Federation announced it has awarded the 23-year-old Wenzel what is called a B-licence and formally registered her as a pro with the International Ski Federation.

In the World Cup, Liechtenstein which has just seven ski lifts and some 6,000 registered skiers, defeated such large snowy states as Canada and the Soviet Union, thanks to the Wenzels.

With a B-license, Wenzel is entitled to conclude publicity contracts and continue skiing in the World Cup and other international races, but she may no longer take part in Olympic events.

She won a silver medal at the Innsbruck Games in 1976 and added two golds and one silver at Lake Placid, besides winning the combined world title along with the World Cup.

A basketball reunion to end all nostalgia— it might!

Two games, a dance, coffee and refreshments: 25 cents

By BILL WALKER

They're going back to 1920, if they can find 'em, and by golly if they do there may not be room to hold the party.

The old Saanich and Suburban Basketball League is having a reunion and the invitation is out for all players, men and women, officials and spectators from the 1920-1940 era to show up for the get-together at Brentwood Community Hall, Saturday, May 24. The fun starts at 8 p.m.

Saanich and Suburbs eh? This is the wide-spread area that was such a hotbed of basketball back when there weren't that many gymnasiums to play in, or speak of, in the city.

There wasn't that much money around either and for 25 cents on a Saturday night, at any one of half a dozen halls, you could get basketball, dancing to a three or four-piece orchestra, coffee and refreshments.

And I mean refreshments, if the players didn't snitch the sandwiches on their way through the kitchen to and from the dressing rooms, which were mostly the washroom or a sheet just hung for the occasion. And those home-made cakes! . . . Mmmm . . . good!

Sure, the gyms weren't the greatest, but who cared?

At Colwood, the ceiling was so low that a slide (you couldn't stop anyway on the slippery dance floor) and a bank shot was the only way the Pierceys, the Peatts and the Shields had a chance at a basket.

In some gyms players ran up the end wall after a shot, the baskets were that close.

At West Road the Lannons, Michells, Sluggetts, Handys, Benns, et al, used to fire over the top of iron bars which stretched from side to side to hold the place together.

At Luxton the Heaths and MacKays were some names that spring to mind and there was a balcony over one end of the floor where cuddling wasn't ruled out.

At Charters Hall in Sooke they locked the players in a box, separated them from the fans by wire mesh, and let them at it. In earlier days they played the ball off the walls, nothing barred, and if you don't think that was something else, you've never played the game.

Later they built a brand new community hall at Sooke, a huge floor by comparison, change rooms, hot water, and teams like the Broadway Clowns and House of David came to visit. The league had hit the big time.

The Helgesens would remember. So would the Michelsens, and Claude Dilley.

Oh, there are names and more names. Hundreds went through the program. You may recall some.

In 1930, for instance, Keating teams won the Saanich Cup from West Road by a margin of 30 points over a six-game series.

In the finale, the West Road girls defeated Keating 20-18 and here's how the scoring went.

West Road — A. Matthews 2, Mary Peden 11, Bea Handy, May Peden, I. Alexander 7 and B. Armstrong.

Keating — M. Scott, V. Handy 4, H. Scott 3, Dot Rendle 5, A. Styan 4 and N. Styan 2.

West Road — T. Peden 5, C. Lannon 8, P. Lannon 8, Stan Bickford 2, Arn Bickford.

Keating — Atkinson 12, Tupman 2, Fred Sutton 3, Ralph Michell 8 and Marchant 2.

Yes, they made mistakes then too. The Keating team was short two points.

Who got them, and other sundry items from the past may be determined — and undoubtedly will — on May 24.

In addition, the Stelly's junior girls basketball team will give an exhibition of its modern-day skills to be followed by another feature of more abiding interest.

This will be a free-shot contest for both men and women from that golden era to be followed by music, dancing and conversation.

If you're eligible and interested, people to contact in the various areas before May 14 are:

Brentwood-West Road: Mike Rice, 652-2137.

Sooke: Bill Sheilds, 479-1864.

Luxton: Mary Charlewood, 479-1855.

And practice up on those free shots. Your past will mean nothing if you can't still prove yourself.

Arsenal wants Cup final delay

LONDON (CP) — Arsenal, deadlocked with Liverpool in an English Football Association Cup semi-final still undecided after 5½ hours of play, wants the Cup final postponed to May 31 from May 10.

"I am sure I am speaking for Liverpool as well as ourselves when I ask the F.A. to delay the final," Arsenal secretary Ken Friar said Tuesday. "I know there are all sorts of difficulties, but in the time left to whichever club gets through to meet West Ham United in the final we just cannot organize the game as it should be organized."

Arsenal and Liverpool drew 1-1 Monday in a second replay of the semi-final and meet again in Coventry on Thursday. The F.A. says that if yet another match is needed it will be played at Sheffield next Monday.

Arsenal meets Velencia of Spain in the European Cupwinners Cup final in Brussels on May 14. It had planned a post-season tour of North America, but has cancelled it.

Because of the marathon semi-final, Ireland has been forced to drop five top players for a friendly soccer international against Switzerland.

New manager Alan Kelly said Steve Heighway of Liverpool and the Arsenal quartet of John Devine, Dave O'Leary, Liam Brady and Frank Stapleton could not be considered.

Cosmos win

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — New York Comsos scored three second-half goals, two by striker Giorgio Chinaglia, to defeat P.O. Cologne of the West German Bundealiga 3-1 in an exhibition soccer game Tuesday night at Giants Stadium.

The Cosmos, three-time champions of the North American Soccer League, dominated play in the scoreless first half, before 24,784 fans.

Barbarians to open against Point Grey

Oak Bay Barbarians will be facing talented rivals in their first game Thursday when 16 teams from various areas of the province invade University of Victoria pitches for opening matches in the 1980 B.C. high school rugby championship.

Barbarians, recent winners of the Greater Victoria title, meet Point Grey, second-ranked school in Vancouver, at 11:30 a.m. after Mt. Douglas Mountainmen, second-top team from the South Island, gets into the action first with a 10 a.m. kickoff against Mountain Secondary of Langley, the top side from the Fraser Valley.

Claremont, South Vancouver Island's third-ranked entry, plays Burnaby South at 11:30 and North Island representative, Lake Cowichan Secondary, has a 10 a.m. kick-off against Centennial of the Fraser Valley.

The 16 schools are split into groups of four for three games each of round-robin play — two on Thursday and one Friday morning. From that, the top school in each goes into sudden-death semi-finals Friday afternoon and the championship final is set for 1:30 p.m. Saturday at Centennial Stadium, prior to the B.C. senior club championship match for the Rounsfel Cup between James Bay Athletic Association and Surrey Braves, which goes at 3 p.m.

Two other James Bay sides are also involved in provincial finals the same day. One tangles with Vancouver Kats at 11:30 a.m. at UVic's McCoy Road field for the third-division crown and the other faces Red Lions of the Vancouver Union for second-division laurels at the same time at Centennial Stadium.

In the same round-robin group as Oak Bay and Point Grey in the school tourney are Semiahmoo and Prince George. With Mt. Doug and Langley in their group are North Kamloops and Cranbrook. Joining Claremont and Burnaby South are North Delta and Kelowna. And the last group is made up of Lake Cowichan, Centennial, Magee and Vernon.

In last year's B.C. tourney on the Mainland, Hillside of North Vancouver, which didn't earn a berth this time, finished second behind Magee and Oak Bay placed third.

Thursday's schedule:

Training camp

Thirteen players from Vancouver Island will take part in a national team training camp and a trial match here on Saturday, May 10, after which the Canadian rugby side to play Wales in Vancouver on May 24 will be named.

The camp, to be held at the University of Victoria from May 8 to 10, will be conducted by national team coach Bruce Howe of UVic assisted by Canada's rugby coaching co-ordinator David Roberts of Ottawa. The trial match will be played on UVic's Wallace Field at 5 p.m. on the final day of the camp.

A total of 37 players from across the country will be at the camp and that number will be cut to a 21-man squad — 15 starters and six reserves — for the game with Wales and will most likely be kept in training for the Canada versus United States test match in Saranac Lake, New York State, on June 8.

Once again, the strong Island connection with national rugby has been maintained with Victoria's Peter Clarke being named for the second year as the Canadian team manager.

Double-dealing charged in title bout

CHICAGO (Reuter) — A federal judge threw a hitch into Muhammad Ali's $12-million comeback fight with Larry Holmes, World Boxing Council heavyweight champion, when he issued an injunction Tuesday that could force Ali to take on Mike Weaver first.

The judge gave promoter Greg Campbell of Madison, Wis., another chance to stage an Ali-Weaver bout, deeming that Campbell had been the victim of some double-dealing in original contract negotiations.

The injunction granted Campbell an extra 11 days to fulfil a contract to promote a bout between Ali and Weaver who knocked out John Tate on March 31 to win the World Boxing Association version of the heavyweight title.

Campbell said after the three-hour hearing: "This means the Ali-Holmes fight is off. I'm the only one with the right to promote an Ali fight."

But Ali's lawyer Jeremiah Marsh said he believed the fight with Holmes would still go ahead on schedule July 11 in Rio de Janeiro because the injunction had not specifically enjoined Ali.

Judge McMillen acknowledged that Ali was an innocent bystander in the contract wrangle.

Campbell contended in his suit that he had lined up a deal with a California syndicate headed by millionaire James Glennie, under which Ali would collect $10 million to fight Weaver.

But he said Ali's former manager, Jabir Muhammad (formerly Herbert Muhammad), and former bodyguard Murad Muhammad had conspired to undermine his contract and let it lapse so they could strike a deal with Glennie for Ali to fight Holmes for $8 million.

Judge McMillen said the Glennie group had called Campbell back from negotiations in Taiwan to make an agreement and then deserted him to deal through Murad Muhammad.

Fight could damage soccer stadium grass

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Local sports authorities say they will not permit the scheduled July 11 heavyweight title boxing match between Larry Holmes and Muhammad Ali to take place in Maracana soccer stadium because it will damage the grass.

Ricardo Labre, head of the Rio de Janeiro state government agency which administers the publicly-owned, 200,000-capacity stadium, said organizers of the bout for the World Boxing Council heavyweight crown did not go through proper procedures to get permission to use the stadium.

Royal Oak gymnasts collect national berths

Six members of the Royal Oak Rhythmic Gymnastics Club will compete in the Canadian championships May 16-19 in Montreal.

Marie Wallace, Dianna Kresier, Jane Hosie, Barb Bishop, Laura McAdam and Heather Clark earned the berth by capturing a gold medal at the Western regional championships last weekend in Edmonton.

In individual competition, Michelle Brousson of the same club placed third all-round in the junior master category; Bishop was third all-round in senior pre-masters; and McAdam and Clark were second and third, respectively, in the junior level III category.

Lalonde refuses to rule out crude, gas pump tax hikes

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberal government has not excluded the possibility of a new tax on all crude oil used in Canada and an increase in the excise tax on gasoline sold at the pump as part of a new energy pricing policy.

Energy Minister Marc Lalonde refused in an interview Tuesday to rule out either option as he heads into crucial negotiations with the producing provinces on a new oil pricing package.

The government would use the extra revenue to help pay for the subsidy that makes up the difference of about $20 a barrel between domestic oil prices and the skyrocketing cost of imported oil. The cost of the subsidy is estimated at $3.1 billion for the year ending March 31.

He was asked in the Commons Tuesday about reports of the new tax, which would be levied on crude oil delivered to refineries. The industry would in turn pass the tax on to consumers in the form of higher prices for gasoline and home heating oil.

After refusing in the House to rule out the possibility of the new tax, he said in the interview: "I'm not going to engage in the game of denying any story that might appear from day to day. It's a game that has no end.

"In fairness to my provincial colleagues, they should be acquainted first with any specific proposals we have in mind."

The minister also made it plain he is not opposed to increasing the gasoline excise tax — the issue that helped defeat the Progressive Conservative government in the Feb. 18 election.

He said the Liberals "had never said there would never be an increase in the excise tax. I'm not saying we're going to do it but we have not ruled it out either.

"We are the ones who introduced it first so we have no ideological hangups about the notion of an excise tax," he said. The present tax of seven cents a gallon was introduced by the Trudeau government in the 1970s.

The proposed four-cent-a-litre (18-cent-a-gallon) increase in the excise tax on gasoline was cited by the Liberals as a major factor in their decision to vote against the energy package outlined in the Progressive Conservative budget of December, causing the defeat of the Clark government and the Feb. 18 election.

The Liberals berated the proposed increase as discriminatory throughout the election campaign and pledged not to reintroduce the measure.

"The question is how hard and how fast are you going to hit consumers with price increases which are going to generate higher inflation and higher unemployment and have a ripple effect," Lalonde said.

He acknowledged he has not presented specifics of federal proposals to the producing provinces.

Canada to pick up bills from embassy stoning

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will pay for damages to the Turkish embassy caused by a mob of stone-throwing Armenian demonstrators last week, External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan said Tuesday.

MacGuigan said in a diplomatic note to Turkish Ambassador Tahir Senturk that the government regrets Thursday's incident and said legal action may also be taken as a result of the demonstration.

"While Canada traditionally has respected the freedom of expression for all its citizens, it cannot condone the use of violence to this end," he said.

A department spokesman said no amount has been determined for the damages — mostly broken windows and paint-smeared walls after about 2,500 Armenians pelted the embassy with stones and paint-filled eggs and skirmished with riot police following a noon-hour rally on Parliament Hill.

Some heads were cracked by the disciplined lines of 150 baton-wielding police, but there were no serious injuries and no arrests.

The demonstrators were protesting against the 1915 slaughter of 1.5 million of their countrymen by Turkish soldiers. Armenia was a nationalistic and Christian part of the Ottoman Empire.

CBC coverage in Quebec cut by staff strike

MONTREAL (CP) — A strike and lockout of television production employees at CBC in Montreal put only a minor crimp in the coverage of National Hockey League playoffs, but it has left much of Quebec without TV news on the referendum.

The walkout by the 900 unionized production workers — which began Friday and has been followed by a lockout which will last until tonight — has cancelled all news and public affairs shows on Radio-Canada, the French-language service of the CBC.

"It's not a very healthy situation," Radio-Canada spokesman Laurent Duval said Tuesday.

"Months of preparation have gone into plans for coverage of the sovereignty-association referendum. If things go badly Wednesday when the lockout ends, it would be very frustrating."

The dispute has prevented tapings, rehearsals and the broadcast of live programming on the French network since last Thursday. Only pre-recorded items can be shown, and Radio-Canada is fulfilling most of its program schedule by running old movies.

French television viewers in Quebec have access to a second network, TVA, but it doesn't have the resources of the federally-owned Radio-Canada.

Neither campaign committee in the referendum would express serious concern about the loss of Radio-Canada coverage.

An aide to Quebec Premier Rene Levesque said the lockout could go on forever as far as the campaign was concerned because Radio-Canada had demonstrated it is "three-to-one against the yes side of the sovereignty-association debate."

The aide said the Crown corporation has given equal time on all issues to Liberal Leader Claude Ryan, the federal government and leaders in the rest of Canada.

The production workers' union, an affiliate of the Quebec-based Confederation of National Trade Unions, staged the walkout to protest Radio-Canada's refusal to agree to the recommendations of a federal conciliation report into the dispute.

2nd hair-raiser for Ken Taylor

OTTAWA (CP) — How much would you pay for a lock of Ambassador Ken Taylor's curly and well-travelled hair?

Or an autographed copy of John Crosbie's doomed budget that brought down the Progressive Conservative government? Or a gravy boat rescued from the ruins of the exclusive Rideau Club?

Area residents will be bidding on these and other unusual items Saturday at an auction to raise money for St. Brigid's summer camp in nearby Low, Que., open to children from all economic and religious backgrounds.

Last year's auction attracted several hundred bidders and netted about $10,000, organizers say.

Among other items available this year are:

If political prizes are more to your liking, Commons Speaker Jeanne Sauve will lead you on a private tour of Parliament or External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan will take you to dinner.

For the more adventurous, Energy Minister Marc Lalonde will play you in a game of squash.

Mortgage swindle $441,000

TORONTO (CP) — Six Toronto residents, including a church minister and an elderly couple, were swindled out of $441,000 in an alleged mortgage investment racket, police said Tuesday.

The elderly couple invested their life savings of $60,000 in mortgages offered by a Toronto brokerage.

The minister invested $70,000 into mortgages that promised speedy, high returns. The biggest loser was a businessman who put out $215,000.

Charged with fraud, theft and breach of trust was Frank Newman Rush, 46, a mortage broker for Western International Corp. of Toronto.

Researcher wins Royal bank award

MONTREAL (CP) — Jacques Genest, founder and director of the Clinical Research Institute of Montreal, is this year's recipient of the Royal Bank Award, the bank announced Tuesday.

Genest, a world-renowned medical researcher and authority on high blood pressure, will receive a gold medal and a cash grant of $50,000 at a ceremony later. The award, instituted in 1967, is intended to recognize outstanding achievement by Canadians.

'Arsenic widow' ordered out

EDMONTON (CP) — A widow who will face murder charges in the deaths of two of her husbands in the United States by lacing their food with arsenic, will probably be deported to the U.S. by Thursday, Harry Mueller, an Edmonton immigration officer, said Tuesday.

Ada Hayes Whittenmyer, 25, was ordered deported from Canada last Friday and was held at Edmonton remand centre pending final arrangements.

Mueller said RCMP and immigration officers had been looking for Whittenmyer for several months prior to her arrest near Athabasca, 160 kilometres north of Edmonton.

The deportation order was approved because she had overstayed her visitor's permit and had worked illegally.

But when she returns to the U.S., police will be waiting for her armed with murder warrants for deaths in Oklahoma and Tennessee.

Whittenmyer met cattle rancher John Whittenmyer of Bartlesville, Okla., through a lonely hearts club advertisement.

Police sources in Canada and the U.S. said she had been taking out similar ads during her stay in Alberta and when arrested was in the company of what officer called "a recently-acquired friend."

Police said Mrs. Whittenmyer was married at least four times.

On March 29, 1979, Whittenmyer died on his ranch.

After an investigation led by County Sheriff George Wayman, an autopsy was ordered. The cause of death was found to be arsenic poisoning and the poison was found in his last meal, a bowl of pea soup.

Wayman said he suspected the man was poisoned over a period of time.

"She sold some cattle the next day after the funeral," Wayman said.

The same day, she disappeared with $20,000 from sale of the cattle.

Investigating the woman's background, police found she had been married to William Clifford Hayes, 46, who died in Dickson, Tenn., in 1974. His body was ordered exhumed and massive amounts of arsenic were found during an autopsy.

Mrs. Whittenmyer received $18,000 in insurance money following Hayes' death.

But Mueller said she was destitute when she was arrested:

"At the time of her arrest, she had $7 in her possession."

Newfoundland runs its colors up the flagpole

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — A geometric design of six triangles and an arrow in blue, red and yellow on a white background has been recommended by a legislature committee as Newfoundland's new provincial flag.

The flat has unveiled in the legislature Tuesday by John A. Carter (PC — St. John's North), chairman of a seven-member committee appointed last fall to select a design to replace the Union Jack.

Carter said the design, drawn by Newfoundland artist Christopher Pratt on the basis of ideas expressed at public hearings, was the unanimous choice of the committee.

"I think there is enough symbolism in the flat to last for the next 600 years," Carter said.

Premier Brian Peckford said when the committee was set up that there was an obvious desire among Newfoundlanders to have their own flag, one that could not be confused with any other.

The president of the Newfoundland Command of the Royal Canadian Legion says he is "absolutely disappointed and disgusted" with the proposed provincial flag.

"I can assure you, too, that the Royal Canadian Legion is against it," Gordon Collins said in an interview Tuesday night.

The legion, Collins said, wants the Union Jack in Newfoundland's flag "in its entirety" and not "some weird idea of what someone else thought."

The Union Jack has served as Newfoundland's flag since 1932.

Flag committee chairman Carter said two red-bordered triangles could be regarded as representing the two parts of the province, Newfoundland and Labrador.

With certain lines blanked out, an observer can see a Christian cross, a trident to represent searfaring, ornamentation similar to that used by Naskaupi Indians of Labrador. Carter said the entire design is like the decoration used on objects by the Beothucks, island aboriginals who became extinct early in the 19th century.

Businessmen cry mini-budget blues

By CAROL GOAR
FP News Service

OTTAWA — A grumpy delegation of senior business executives told Finance Minister Allan MacEachen today they didn't think much of his recent mini-budget.

In their annual pre-budget meeting with the finance minister, spokesmen for the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, the largest business lobby in the country were more strident than usual, complaining that the new government appeared to have forgotten its election promise to control its own spending.

"An increased deficit, particularly when viewed against a commitment to a major effort to control expenditures, could undermine the government's credibility regarding fiscal discipline," warned Tony Amery, chairman of the chamber's economic policy committee.

The business group is also distressed that the new government has chosen to implement the corporate surtax announced last December by MacEachen's Tory predecessor John Crosbie.

This is annoying on two counts: It irritates businessmen that the federal government is demanding that they channel an additional five per cent of their earnings into the federal treasury. But it upsets them even more that their money might be earmarked to pay for the $35-a-week increase in benefits the Liberals have promised needy pensioners.

"The costs of the proposed increase in the guaranteed income supplement should be offset by reductions in other federal expenditure programs."

The chamber, which sees itself as the voice of free enterprise, has long objected to programs designed to divert business dollars away from private investment into social asssitance programs.

New mortgage crumb?

OTTAWA (CP) — Housing Minister Paul Cosgrove said Tuesday the federal government may toss another crumb to a few homeowners hard-pressed by high mortgage rates.

Cosgrove told the Canadian Institute of Public Real Estate Companies the government is considering measures to encourage lenders to make more use of the graduated payment mortgage program offered for the past two years by the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corp.

However, he again ruled out any substantial mortgage assistance this year.

The graduated payment mortgage program has met with only lukewarm response since its introduction by a former Liberal government in 1978.

Basically, it attempts to make purchases of homes easier by setting initial payments lower than they would be under a conventional mortgage.

As the years go by, the homeowner starts to pay more — on the theory that because of inflation, his or her salary will be higher and the payments easier.

By MARY JANIGAN
FP News Service

OTTAWA — Angry Indian leaders have dismissed Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's peace offering of stronger local governments, charging that he used their constitutional convention merely as a platform to oppose the Quebec referendum.

In an eloquent speech last night, Trudeau told the first national chiefs' conference in Canadian history that massive federal spending programs have failed to relieve dire Indian social problems. He vowed to revamp the Indian act to grant more powers to local band councils to administer economic and social programs and he repeated his promise to allow Indian input into the upcoming constitutional talks.

His promises baffled and enraged Indian leaders, however, who have devoted the last two days to a demand for a full role at the constitutional table. Almost 400 of Canada's 573 chiefs have been mulling suggestions for various forms of national government including special provincial status and the possibility of a national Indian government to administer Indian affairs.

"He had really nothing to offer that was new," fumed George Erasmus, president of the Northwest Territories Dene Nation. "He talked about local self-government but we're not interested in municipal governments — we want a helluva lot more than that — we're talking about national governments.

"And this speech was coy — he seemed to be concentrating on Quebec — like 'Look, our needs are your needs' — how insincere can you get?"

Sol Sanderson, chief of the Federation of Saskatchewan Indians, dismissed Trudeau's remarks as a "restatement of old policy — the participation that he's proposing is not we'e asking for.

"He's still caught up in labels like 'sovereignty' — he'll allow us to carry out social and economic programs but he's not prepared to let us define our own political sovereignty. He'll never understand until he has Indian advisers."

Trudeau told the chiefs that massive federal spending programs have failed to slice "scandalous levels" of native unemployment, alcoholism, imprisonment, poor health and family breakdowns. And he dismissed increased funding as futile.

"The key to this most agonizing problem is to find ways to break the bond of deep-seated dependency on government resources and government decisions," he said. "The key to the problem is to encourage the Indian people of Canada to assume, gradually, a greater degree of control over your own affairs."

He went on to promise that Indians will be involved in discussions of constitutional matters which directly affect them. He did not invite the Indians to participate in the full negotiations.

Trudeau did, however, repeatedly link the native claims with the May 20 Quebec referendum. He warned that renewed federalism may bring greater local self-government to the Indians but "it does not make either possible or desirable any movement toward the division of one sovereign nation into several such nations."

Moreover, he pleaded with the Indians — especially those in Quebec — to "help us survive as a nation." He said that the Indians know that Canada is their best hope for more help, arguing that "you and I are natural allies" in the battle against separatism.

Indian leaders promptly scoffed "paternalism" and countered that Trudeau was wrapped up in the "emotionalism" of the Quebec question. They said that he failed to understand that their goal of a national Indian government does not mean separation from the Canadian federation.

For the past two days, a procession of chiefs has argued passionately that the size of the Indian population and lands entitle them to greater national control over their own affairs.

National Indian Brotherhood president Noel Starblanket, for example, demanded that "Indian government" become "part and parcel of the Canadian constitution." He pointed out that Prince Edward Island has four members of Parliament and four senators, control over education and resources and a full place at the constitutional table.

"Prince Edward Island has one-third the population of Indians and a smaller land mass than existing Indian lands," he said. "Yet Canada's original peoples have never been granted the same courtesies or rights."

The majority of chiefs are convinced that if the don't get invited to the table, vital Indian rights such as the treaties will be somehow shuffled out of any new emerging constitution. Moreover, they belive that Trudeau will only listen when he is deeply concerned about the possibility of Quebec separation: "The squeaky wheel gets the grease," says one brotherhood official.

British Columbia chief Robert Manuel suggested that the chiefs form a legislature to fight for an increased land and resource base. He said that band councils should take control over 24 key government areas ranging from justice and revenues to environmental regulation.

The Alberta Indians argued that Indian MPs should be elected from Indian constituencies and that Indian nations should "have jurisdiction over all matters of a domestic nature within the boundaries of their lands."

Most non-Quebecers against PQ plan: poll

MONTREAL (CP) — A Gallup poll released today indicates 55 per cent of Canadians living outside Quebec think the federal government should refuse to negotiate sovereignty-association with Quebec.

In the second poll of its kind relased within a week, 32 per cent said they favored talks involving Ottawa if the Quebec government wins its May 20 referendum for a mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association.

Thirteen per cent said they were undecided when the poll was taken during the first week of April.

Asked whether their provincial governments should negotiate, 60 per cent said no and 27 per cent yes. Another 13 per cent were undecided.

Another Gallup poll, conducted April 19-20 for the Council for Canadian Unity and released last Thursday, indicated 67 per cent of Canadians outside Quebec think their premiers should refuse to negotiate sovereignty-association.

Another 19 per cent favored negotiations and 14 per cent were undecided or gave no opinion.

The new Gallup poll showed respondants were six-to-one in favor of Quebec staying in Canada. Asked how they would advise Quebecers to vote on the referendum, 75 per cent of those polled recommended the federalist no option and 13 per cent yes.

Caper Ken gets 'freedom' award

NEW YORK (CP) — Ken Taylor, Canada's ambassador to Iran, received the President's Award from the Overseas Press Club on Tuesday in recognition for the year's "greatest effort in the cause of freedom and human rights."

Taylor spirited six American diplomats out of Iran after their embassy had been seized by militants.

Carter, a Georgian, joked in his presentation speech that, coming from the U.S. South, he can appreciate Canada's worries about "cultural imperialism."

He also said, in praising Taylor's actions on behalf of the U.S.: "He is the kind of diplomat that makes me proud to be a flack for diplomacy."

In accepting the award, Taylor said he was honored on behalf of "my colleagues who worked with me in Tehran, my colleagues in Washington and those in Ottawa."

"I only happened to be the individual named."

WATER REPORT

PARTLY CLOUDY

Your area will continue to experience less than perfect water today. In fact, nothing in the long range forecast suggests conditions will improve.
That's because the municipally-treated water you drink may contain chlorine, rust, sediment and other particles that can slip through even the best treatment system for collect as water travels to your home! Making your water look less than clear. Less than clean. Less than appealing. Conditions you can improve — with the Instapure Water Filter by Water Pik.
Instapure is simple to install yourself. No plumber needed.
The Instapure Water Filter cleans municipally treated water between the tap and your glass. It attaches easily to your faucet so each time you turn on the water it circulates through the effective two stage filtering system.
If you think your water has a funny taste, an unpleasant odour, or a cloudy appearance don't wait for the water report to improve. Try an Instapure Water Filter by Water Pik. It could make the difference.

Before the judge

Ada Mary James of 7-497 Island Highway was remanded in custody to appear today in provincial court in connection with the Monday night stabbing of Toby Willie, 30, of the same address.

Too many people are forgetting their court appearances, said Judge Blake Allan.

"It didn't use to happen," the judge said after being told a Sooke man brought before him on a bench warrant for October drinking and driving charges thought his trial was Monday instead of last Wednesday.

Claude Proulx, 37, of 2911 Sooke Lake Road, showed up Monday at court and when told of his missed appearance turned himself over to the sheriff's office Tuesday morning.

"It's not acceptable that he comes along three, five days later," said Judge Allan, noting that defendants are first told the proper dates in open court and then supplied with the date on a paper. He noted the court procedures to make defendants aware of proper dates almost treated them like children.

But the judge was reminded by prosecutor Robert Mulligan that as long as honest forgetfulness is a legal excuse for missed trial dates there is little the court can do.

Proulx was found early Oct. 28 behind the wheel of his truck — with the engine running — stopped in in the middle of Sooke Road at Kangaroo Road.

The court was told Proulx, aware that he shouldn't continue driving in his condition, thought he had pulled his truck off the road. When he was unable to raise a cab on his CB radio, he went to sleep with the engine running to keep warm.

Proulx, who had changed his plea to guilty, was fined $500 and given six months probation to include the impaired driver's course.

Mike Poon, 864 Queens, pleaded guilty to defrauding a Saanich department store where he was observed April 16 substituting a lower price tag on a $4.69 screwdriver.

He was fined $75.

By coincidence there was a police stakeout on an unrelated matter near the downtown parking lot that a 29-year-old man chose to prowl April 22.

Denis Galipeau, 341 Island Highway, pleaded guilty to theft of a flashlight and batteries from a car.

The court was told an officer observed Galipeau attempt to enter at least one other vehicle before gaining entry to the one in which he stole the articles.

He was sentenced to 12 days and will appear again Tuesday in connection with other theft-related charges.

'Pretty poor lot,' says judge as man jailed

A county court judge blamed friends of an accused Monday before sentencing 21-year-old Richard Byron Barker to a year in jail for breaking into a Saanich home and beating two men with a 2 by 4 two months ago.

Judge G.B. Ladner found Barker guilty of four counts in connection with an incident Feb. 20 at the home of Andrew and Susan Glover, 730B Violet, when Glover and a friend Dale Pennell were attacked by two masked men who walked into the livingroom as they were playing an electronic game on TV.

Barker was sentenced to a year for breaking and entering with intent to commit an assault; two months for assault causing bodily harm to Pennell; one month for common assault of Glover, and one month for having his face masked with intent to commit an indictable offence.

All terms will be served concurrently and Ladner recommended that Barker be sent to a forestry camp.

He said he was taking Barker's age and abused upbringing into account, as well as 6½ weeks spent in custody awaiting trial.

But he said he felt a degree of sympathy for the accused in view of pressure put upon him to commit the offences.

"I don't know that the others involved in the case deserve as much sympathy as the accused," Ladner said.

"The lot of them are a pretty poor lot. He was made use of to his detriment by the witness Antrobus."

Ladner referred to Shelly Antrobus, who said she was upset by things Pennell was alleged to have said about her and members of her family. At the time she had just broken off a 3½-year relationship with Pennell.

"I thought someone should go and talk to him and get him to stop saying these things," she said.

Antrobus also said she had known Richard Barker like a brother because her older sister had been his foster mother. And she said Pennell had called Barker a wimp.

Barker told the court he had agreed to go and see Pennell out of regard for Antrobus, but that it was really just to scare him.

He said he and his brother Anthony, 18, put on knitted ski masks, pulled over their heads with eye and mouth holes, and picked up pieces of lumber just before entering Glover's home. He was mildly angry as he went in.

"I took a swing at Andy Glover and he ran out the back door. I heard someone say my name and I took a couple of swings at Dale, at his legs," Barker said.

Becoming angrier, he said he threw the 2 by 4 down and began striking Pennell with his fists.

"Then I threw him across the room."

He said he wanted to scare Glover and had not struck hard with the piece of wood. He had not wanted to hurt Pennell, either, but to scare him.

Glover was bruised and his wristwatch was broken when struck once on the arm. Pennell suffered several blows to the arms and legs, a cut scalp and bloody nose. No injuries were serious.

Anthony Barker said Antrobus had been saying things "to get Rick riled up at Dale. She wanted him to kick the shit out of him," and "kept bugging Rick to do it," he told the court.

Witness Arnold Lenzen, who heard some of the conversation urging Barker to go to Pennell, said Antrobus, her sister Lesley Burley and Anthony Barker had been at Stewart's restaurant for about an hour and a half the evening of the offence, and that all were "more drunk than sober" when they left.

He said Shelly and Lesley were doing the urging.

Defence counsel Patrick Sweeney said Barker had been subject to brutal treatment by his father from the age of six until he became a ward of the ministry of human resources at 14.

Succumbing to the urging of two girls from whom he had received love and understanding was "to a considerable extent the motive to this circumstance," Sweeney said.

Juror hit again by the flu bug

The trial of 23 men accused of importing 33.5 tons of marijuana last year off Tofino had its fourth setback Tuesday because of a juror's illness.

A woman member of the jury who was absent Monday recovering from a weekend bout of flu returned at 10 a.m. when the trial was to resume.

By 10:45 she felt ill again, causing postponement of the trial to today at 10.

Twice earlier in the trial jurors were absent due to flu, forcing adjournments.

During the brief proceedings Tuesday counsel representing the accused entered a statement acknowledging 10 facts which lawyer Josiah Wood said he hoped "would shorten these proceedings and enable us to get down to the real issues of this case."

The admissions include the identity of each accused and the fact that four of them — Jaime Marin, Paul Oscar Nelson, Michael Walter Butler and Albergipson Frasser-Afanador — were aboard the MV Whitecap May 18, 1979, when the ship left Neah Bay, Wash., and travelled to No Name Bay, B.C..

Man not guilty of engine theft

A county court jury returned a not guilty verdict after 90 minutes of deliberation Tuesday in the trial of James Purcell White, 31, accused of stealing a $600 outboard engine and possession of stolen property.

Judge E.J.C. Stewart had told jurors they must find White not guilty on the first count if there was any reasonable doubt in their minds, and that there could be no conviction on the second count in that case.

White was charged some time after the alleged offence on Feb. 14 of last year in Esquimalt. The motor was owned by Kenneth Hough, the Crown said.

William McElmoyle represented the accused.

In another sitting of county court, Judge Leslie Cashman said he was not satisfied with identification of accused J.G. Galos, alias Reti, and found him not guilty of being in possession of a Chargex credit card, knowing it to be stolen, property of Murray Carlin of Duncan, with which it was alleged he tried to obtain $200 from the Royal Bank at Sidney, Aug. 1, 1978.

Carlin said the card was missing after his wallet was taken by an intruder at his house around Easter 1978.

Cashman suspended sentence and put John Fletcher Green, 42, on probation for three years after finding him guilty of false pretences in making a personal loan application, and in obtaining $6,000 credit at the Bank of Montreal at Duncan, March 5, 1976.

Crown counsel Bernard Morahan asked for jail as a deterrent, which he called a prime consideration in bad economic times, when people "caught up in a financial web turn to criminality."

Green, representing himself, said he had turned to Christianity, and referred to marital and personal problems with which he'd had to deal. He suggested he ad put marriage ahead of other responsibilities.

Inmates claiming the chili served for dinner was "too watery" set a small fire at Louisiana's Acadia Parish Jail that injured 14 inmates. Authorities said all the prisoners injured were treated for smoke inhalation at the Legion Hospital and returned to the custody of the sheriff's department. Firemen rushed to the jail at dinnertime and found a small fire set by inmates near the dinner tables, with sheets, blankets and trash used as the fuel. Warden Huey Kirsch said the inmates were unhappy about the menu. "I was called ... that we had a riot at the jail," he said. "The inmates in the left wing were complaining about the food; the chili that we served tonight was too watery and they rebelled against it."

Walters

Hype springs eternal — and whatever the negative connotations, aspiring stars pay big bucks for it because it's the stuff of which stars and detergent sales alike are made. Now world-famed model-cum-movie actress Iman tells all about hers. The story always has been that she was a poor ignorant little Somalian girl "discovered" by fashion photographer Peter Beard as she herded cattle in the wilds of tribal Africa. The truth, says Iman is "My father was a Somalian diplomat and my mother was a gynecologist. I was educated in Catholic boarding schools and I speak five languages." So why the cattleherd yarn? Says her New York publicist, John Carmen, who dreamed it up, "Everyone loves a Cinderella story."

Barbara Walters managed a rare interview with Henry Ford and found him a heavy supporter of the institution of secrecy. Says the retired Ford Motor Corp. chairman, "I've destroyed as much of my paperwork as I possibly have so that nobody will ever know anything about me ... I want to make sure nobody knows anything about me except what's in the public domain. They'll never find anything about me going through my files." He doesn't say why he's so avid for anonymity. The interview will be broadcast tonight and Thursday.

Rudolf Hess, Adolf Hitler's former deputy, spent his 86th birthday quietly without a break from routine in Spandau jail. Hess received a regular monthly visit from his wife, Ilse. Since 1966, he has been the sole prisoner of the 600-cell jail administered jointly by Second World War allies.

abby

Dear Abby:
When Appalled wrote that she was dismayed that her married daughter was going to let her three-year-old son and 19-year-old unmarried sister witness the birth of her second child, you said, "It should be a fascinating and educational experience."

My wife and I are contemplating having a child. I would like to invite her 11-year-old nephew and members of his Little League team to witness the conception of the child. I also think it would be a "fascinating and educational experience" for the neighborhood kindergarten class to watch.

As Crazy As You

Dear Abby:
I am a registered nurse who has assisted in at least 5,000 births, and every time one of those supportive husbands scrubs and dons a gown to be with his wife during childbirth, I hold my breath for fear he will faint. Men in the delivery room are a pain in the neck. The bigger they are, the harder they fall. Abby, please don't encourage making childbirth a family affair. We don't need fainting daddies and hysterical kids.

Martha At St. John's

When I was nine, my mother gave birth prematurely to my brother. I was the only one present — not counting my little sisters who were four and six at the time. It took me years to get over it. I'm not sure I ever did. I am now 36 years old, married.

No Children In Canada

Allowing a 19-year-old unmarried girl to witness the birth of a baby might cause her to go on the Pill for the duration. But a three-year-old child! Abby, that's sick! According to the Bible, Elizabeth hid herself for five months before John was born. Births should be sacred and private — not a sideshow.

M.S.F.

I think that a young expectant mother who wants to let her three-year-old watch a new life come into the world is out of her mind. And so are you for agreeing with her. If it's such a great "learning experience," why not invite the toddler's nursery school class, and serve ice cream and cookies? Better yet, why not hire a hall and sell tickets?

MAC

I've read and reread that letter 17 times, and still can't believe my eyes. Abby, as a nurse (obstetrics and surgery) for 23 years, and mother of five, I think even a normal birth is not for the eyes of a three-year-old. Can you guarantee that the birth will be quick, quiet and uncomplicated? Seeing his mother moan, scream and yell could be traumatic for the youngster. And heaven forbid there should be complications! To expose a child to these facts of life at such a tender age could give him psychological problems for life. This is child abuse! Where were your brains on this one, Abby?

BUTTER CHURN is getting a workout at Beaver Lake school in Saanich as part of January 15, 1910— a program designed to help students experience one day in the life of the Nicholls family who farmed in the area in the early 1900s. The program is a three-generation affair with grandparents, parents and children all playing roles as the family goes through five typical Saturday experiences — getting up, breakfast, chores, going to town and Saturday night at home. It's Saturday night above as Cindy Sharples takes a turn at the churn — one of many artifacts and photos used in the program, which demonstrates how family unity, co-operation and sharing were vital to life in 1910.

Fondue fun is fitting for the 80s

By JOANNE GOOD

CALGARY (CP) — Think small, said the prophets of the 1980s.

After being encouraged to consume, consume, consume, it won't be easy to conserve, conserve, conserve.

And when it comes to the family food plan, changing food habits can be an emotional challenge.

Protein probably stands out as the most overused food in our diet. That doesn't mean we have to give up meat. Nothing can match meat for protein and the excellent supply of iron it provides.

Especially when many North American diets are still low on iron.

But for every day protein quotas it doesn't have to be burgers, hot dogs and steak three meals a day.

The main problem when you try to introduce an alternative is that it gets little more than a nod as a second-rank meal.

Whole-grain cereals, dairy products and fish probably play a more important role than they do in North American diets.

A complete food and top-notch source of protein like cheese is still not revered as it is in other lands.

Tucked into the Alps and surrounded by powerful neighbors, the Swiss have learned to fully utilize both hills and valleys for housing and agriculture.

Their food also exemplifies a sense of economy without loss of quality. Most Swiss cooks will take quality over quantity any day.

The three basic ingredients are Swiss cheese (Emmenthal and Gruyere), dry white wine and Swiss kirsch, a spirit distilled from cherries. A good equivalent is sold in Canadian liquor stores.

But the best part of fondue is the tradition of serving it communal-style to friends and after skiing or when the family gets together around a big table.

Part of the fun is the time-honored "fondue game" of paying a penalty if you lose a bread cube in the cheese pot, said Luthi. Old Swiss custom requires the debtor to supply a round of drinks or a bottle of wine.

But that's just for men, said Luthi. Women are supposed to pay with a kiss.

What is served for drinks is also important, he said. Black tea is traditionally served with a sipping glass of kirsch. Both act as digestive aids since cheese can be quite binding if eaten alone.

But many choose a good white wine and the sipping glass of kirsch.

"Again the reason being that hot cheese and cold wine don't go together well in the stomach," said Luthi. "Or else it's just a good excuse to make a party of a fondue."

But whatever you serve for drinks, make sure the bread you choose is at least a day old because fresh bread and cheese are hard on the stomach.

One last word of wisdom for fondue fanciers, said Luthi.

"When you feel like you could have one bite more, that's when to stop. Then you can enjoy another fondue next week instead of hoping you won't see another for two months."

Perfect treat for Mom's day

Take the time to create a joyful mood by setting a brightly coloured table. Add fresh flowers and bring a feeling of spring to the decor.

Serve a meal that includes the favourite foods of breakfast. A tasty quiche can combine eggs, cheese, ham or fish and any other ingredient Mom is particularly fond of.

Make up several pies before Mother's day and simply heat up the main dish treat on the Sunday morning.

SWISS TUNA QUICHE
1 9-inch pastry shell
1 (7-ounce) can tuna, well drained and flaked
4 ounces (1 cup) Swiss cheese, grated
½ cup green onions, sliced
2 eggs
½ cup mayonnaise
½ cup milk

Pierce pastry with fork. Bake in 375°F oven 8 minutes; remove. In large bowl toss together tuna, cheese and onions, spoon into pastry. In small bowl beat together remaining ingredients. Pour over cheese mixture. Bake 35 to 40 minutes or until knife inserted in centre comes out clean. Makes 6 servings.

Note: ½ pound lean ground beef, cooked and drained may be substituted for the tuna.

HAM & CHEESE PIE
1 unbaked 23 cm pastry shell
250 ml mayonnaise
250 ml milk
2 eggs
15 ml corn starch
375 ml cubed cooked ham
375 ml chopped Swiss cheese
100 ml sliced green onion
2 ml pepper

Mix together real mayonnaise, milk, eggs, and corn starch until smooth. Stir in ham, cheese, onion and pepper. Turn into pastry shell. Bake in (180°C) 350°F oven 35 to 40 minutes or until knife inserted in centre comes out clean. Makes 6 servings.

SPECIAL SEAFOOD QUICHE
1⅓ cups all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup cooking oil
2 tablespoons ice cold water

Mix flour and salt in bowl. Blend corn oil in thoroughly with fork. Sprinkle all of water over mixture; mix well. Press dough firmly into ball with hands. Flatten dough slightly and immediately roll out to 12-inch circle between 2 sheets of waxed paper. Wipe the table with damp cloth to prevent paper from slipping. Peel off top paper; place pastry in pan paper-side up. Peel of paper and fit pastry loosely into pan. Flute edge. Prick shell thoroughly and bake in 425°F oven about 7 minutes.

SEAFOOD FILLING
1 (6-ounce) can crabmeat
1 (7-ounce) can small shrimp
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ to 1 cup cooked asparagus, broccoli or other green vegetable
¼ cup finely chopped onion
1 tablespoon oil
3 eggs
½ cup sou cream
½ cup mayonnaise
½ teaspoon garlic salt
¼ teaspoon papper
1 cup shredded Swiss cheese

Combine crabmeat, shrimp, lemon juice and cooked vegetable, set aside. Saute onion in corn oil until softened, add to seafood mixture. Beat eggs lightly. Stir in sour cream, mayonnaise, garlic salt, pepper and cheese.

Combine with seafood mixture. Spread in pastry shell and bake in 375°F oven 35 to 40 minutes or until knife inserted in centre comes out clean.

Spare parts soon to be dime a dozen?

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

The replacement of body organs and spare body parts has reached unbelievably exciting proportions in world medicine and science. The wonders of bio-engineering miracles make it possible to translate science-fiction into reality.

It is really expected that in the next two decades the replacement of most body organs will be possible. Artificial organs that are now in the drawing-board stage are expected to become firm, functioning realities during that time.

The artificial heart is no longer a mere speculation. Human trials have been made with many signs of success.

The shortage of human blood for transfusion has stimulated exciting scientific progress in finding reliable blood substitutes. A special emulsion of fluorocarbons can actually transport oxygen in the blood and can be effectively used in transfusions.

Perhaps the most startling advances now under way are methods by which the deaf will hear and the blind will see. With electronic devices, stimulation of the brain may modify both of these deficiencies. Blind volunteers are already trying out these methods of by-passing their seeing deficiencies. Although artificial hearing is not yet as advanced as artificial sight, research continues actively in stimulating hearing among those afflicted with sensori-neural deafness.

One of the most exciting aspects of modern science is the development of an effective artificial pancreas. It is hoped that one day the burden of daily injections of insulin for diabetics may be obviated. Highly sensitive devices may balance the sugar level in the blood and keep it at the ideal level for diabetics.

Dialysis, the method by which toxic substances are removed from the blood in patients with kidney failure, has made impressive strides. A prototype is already available that suggests that soon an artificial kidney may be implanted in the body to substitute for the cumbersome elements of modern-day dialysis.

Replacement of joints, once thought to be fictional, is now a firm reality. Hip joints, knee joints, toe joints, elbow joints and wrist joints are being replaced daily for those deformed by disease. Arthritics who once were unable to function are now being given a second chance at productive living.

An electronic device to be implanted deep into the neck may yet be able to control high blood pressure and maintain it at a normal level.

Artificial livers, artificial lungs, and artificial blood vessels are already being tried in experimental animals. There is virtually no limit to the brilliant speculations that soon will be realities.

Mmm! Mmmuffins!

Muffins fit into any meal of the day. When made at home they can have the special ingredients that complement the other part of a meal.

At breakfast for those who might prefer to skip the it, two muffins can break the monotony of toast. Since homemade muffins contain additional nutritious ingredients and a minimum of sugar, a good breakfast would result. Just add either a glass of milk, a glass of reconstituted frozen orange juice, or a lot of yogurt.

For lunch at home or packed in a lunch kit, muffins of one kind or another add that important surprise needed to keep packed lunches, particularly, from getting into a set pattern. Often they may take the place of sweet cookies as dessert.

Suppertime muffins have a place when salads are served. They can be flavored with herbs for vegetable salads; or with fruit to go with fruit salads.

Even so, muffins are not intended for daily fare to permanently take the place of good plain bread at all times, for they too would become boring. As pleasant and nourishing changes, they are delicious.

When using the oven for baking other food, make up one of the recipes, until you have tried them all. You will be able to make some changes to suit your needs and probably end up with your own recipes. Use your metric measuring cup and spoons for the metric recipes; no need to think of converting at any point.

WHEAT GERM MUFFINS

50 mL soft margarine
50 mL brown sugar, level not packed
1 small egg
250 mL milk from skim powder
375 mL unbleached flour
50 mL wheat germ
7 mL baking powder
2 mL salt

Cream margarine with sugar; add egg, beat with wooden spoon. Stir in milk.

Measure dry ingredients into sifter. Stir all into liquid, quickly mixing until all is moistened, but do not beat. Mixture will be lumpy.

Fill 12 greased and lightly floured muffin pans two-thirds full.

Bake in preheated fairly hot oven 200 deg. C. for about 20 minutes until lightly browned, and tops spring back when tested with finger.

For readers liking bananas added to baked goods, here is a recipe for Banana muffins. Use those that are ripe but not mushy.

BANANA MUFFINS

½ cup soft margarine
2 Tbsp. sugar
2 small eggs
2 medium bananas, mashed
½ cup wholewheat flour
1 cup unbleached flour
¼ cup wheat germ
1¼ tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. baking soda
¼ tsp. salt
¼ cup dates, fine cut

Cream margarine with sugar; add eggs, beating well with large wooden soon. Stir in mashed bananas.

Measure all dry ingredients into sifter. Sift into egg mixture and stir just enough to form a lumpy mixture. Then lightly stir in the date pieces.

Bake at moderate heat 177 deg. C. for about 20 minutes or until tops spring back when tested with finger tip. Makes 24 small muffins.

The following Cheese-Rice Muffins are really at their best when freshly made and served from the oven. It is a recipe that can be mostly prepared ahead of mealtime by having the rice cooked and cold; the cheese grated, and remaining dry ingredients measured into the sifter.

You can even put the 2 eggs (whole) in the mixing bowl as a reminder. All ready to go.

CHEESE RICE MUFFINS

2 small eggs
250 mL cooked cold brown rice
125 mL milk from skim powder
125 mL grated cheddar cheese
125 mL unbleached flour
125 mL wholewheat flour
10 mL baking powder
2 ml salt

Beat eggs well with whisk. Stir in rice, milk and grated cheese.

Note: If cutting the quantity of cheese for any reason, you will need to replace with an equal quantity of soft margarine as fat.

Sift in measured dry ingredients. Stir to blend. Mixture will be lumpy.

Spoon into well-greased and floured muffin pans, about two-thirds full. Bake in hot oven around 220 deg. C. until tops spring back when pressed. Serve hot. Makes 12 large muffins.

The next muffins are suited for taking on hikes or backpacking trips. They are more dense in texture, packed with long lasting nutrients for energy. I call them Hiking Muffins. Here they are. Keep the recipe for summer and fall use too.

HIKING MUFFINS

125 mL soft margarine
50 mL brown sugar
15 mL blackstrip molasses
2 small eggs
2 mL salt
175 mL wheat germ
125 mL skim milk powder
50 mL brewers' yeast
250 mL wholewheat flour
5 mL baking powder
175 mL unbleached flour
250 mL raisins (optional)
125 mL coarsely ground sunflower seeds
375 mL milk from skim powder
50 mL oat flakes

Begin by creaming margarine with sugar and molasses. Add eggs and beat. Stir in dry ingredients. Then add liquid milk all at once. Mix only to blend. Add oat flakes The mixture will be lumpy.

Spoon into greased muffin pans, or into paper cups for softer texture. Bake at moderate 190 deg. C. for about 20 minutes or until tops spring back when pressed lightly with finger. About 18 muffins.

Work quickly with muffins to get full action of smallest amount of baking powder and baking soda, neither adding value other than to raise the texture of the muffins.

Don't expect these muffins to be light and airy. The ingredients are different than in most you may buy, and flavors with each batch will be different. The family will soon have favorites, and from then on, other kinds can be invented.

Note: By this time, with your metric measuring cup and spoons you will have discovered there are no problems with metric recipes. And you simply use old measuring utensils with old-type recipes. No changes need be made with those.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, May 1, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What appears on surface could be a coverup — know and dig deep. Accent on intrigue, financial manipulation, settling on a price. Steer clear of self-deception. Be considerate, but not gullible. Special message will be clarified.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Legal pressures dominate scene. Accent on commitments, rights and permissions, dealings with authorities, getting green light to proceed with special transaction. Capricorn, Cancer natives figure prominently. Time is on your side.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Study Taurus message; avoid direct confrontations. Take ring roads — emphasize service, unique methods of getting job done. Aries, Virgo, Libra natives figure prominently — and so does the number 9. You get "break" in connection with display, distribution.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): New approach wins the marbles. Emphasize independence, originality — make special contacts, create and imprint style. Member of opposite sex figures prominently. You might fall madly in love! Leo is very much in picture.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Follow through on hunch, give full rein to intuitive intellect acquiesce to clandestine conference with Cancer individual. Romance is in the air! Property is worth more than originally estimated. Family member proves a valuable ally.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Travel, writing, clashes of ideas, excitement of challenge all figure in your personal scenario. Highlight humor, versatility, willingness to expand base of operations. Body image is more important to you than in recent past. Answers lie in diet, nutrition and proper exercise!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Revise, review, be meticulous about details. An exciting, imaginative member of opposite sex inspires you. Money logjam is corrected and cash flow resumes. Aquarian figures prominently. You will be asked to dismantle a project — for the ultimate purpose of a rebuilding program.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Get going, take lead, make changes, express views in dynamic, creative manner. Love is in picture. You make right move at proper time. You grab defeat by scruff of neck and shake it into victory! Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius natives play key roles in your personal scenario.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You tend to "drift" into situation involving major purchases, domestic changes, adjustments, financial credit and interest rates. Get glimpse of what occurs behind scenes; be aware of motives, hidden or otherwise.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Study Sagittarius message. Accent on hidden values, romance, discovery that someone intends to "pull wool" over your eyes. Maintain equilibrium. Tact, humor, alertness — these surge to forefront, adding to your strength and attractiveness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Special recognition comes your way — you could receive a medal! Accent on prestige, reputation, defining terms, seeing people as they want you to view them — and also gaining actual insights. Capricorn, Cancer natives figure prominently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Long-range prospects come into focus. You sense what is to occur — you can be "one-up" on competition. Publish, promote, distribute, get what is due. Refuse to be pushed to sidelines. Aries, Libra individuals play significant roles.

IF MAY 1 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensual, independent, attractive to opposite sex. You often find yourself the center of controversy. This is because you are not afraid to express definite ideas. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. You make changes in lifestyle this year, perhaps a change of residence. September and November will be memorable for you in 1980. You travel in June and social life becomes more active. Popularity increases — opportunity exists for publishing, for earning more money and for enjoying life to a greater extent. August could be your "falling in love" month!

French food jets here easy

Loin of Lamb Dijonnaise . . . recipe in free booklet

Modern transportation methods have made it possible for Canadians to enjoy a variety of foods which once were either scarce or unknown in this country.

One example is found in the hundreds of specialty foods from France, a country with culinary traditions stretching back over centuries. French food items available in Victoria include herb tea, pates, crepes, vinegars and mustards, cheeses, escargot, chestnuts, babas, biscuits, jams, jellies, bisques, soups and dozens more specialties.

Now, the French food people have brought out a booklet, containing menus and recipes and showing how to add flair to an ordinary meal through the use of some of these specialty products. The booklets shows how any housewife can achieve gourmet effects without being a professional chef.

Copies of this booklet How To Entertain From Two To 20 Persons is available free by writing: Foods and Wines, of France, P.O. Box 9660, Main Post Office, Vancouver, B.C., V6B 4G3.

LOIN OF LAMB A LA DIJONNAISE

1 loin of lamb serves 2 people
Dijon mustard
white breadcrumbs
fresh parsley
Salt and pepper

Cooking time : 15 minutes per pound.

Salt and pepper loin — bake in hot oven — three-quarters of the way through its cooking time, spread with Dijon mustard and sprinkle with breadcrumbs and chopped parsley. Return to oven to complete cooking. Serve with flageolets and tomatoes "Belle hotesse".

TOMATOES "BELLE HOTESSE"

2 tomatoes
1 tbsp. olive oil
1 garlic clove finely chopped
½ tbsp. breadcrumbs
Chopped parsley
Salt, pepper, basil

Heat olive oil in a frying pan and cook tomatoes cut in half slowly cut side down. After 10 minutes turn them on the other side. Season with salt, pepper and basil. When slightly browned, place tomatoes in a baking dish and cover with chopped garlic, parsley and breadcrumbs. Pour in the cooking liquid and put in oven (broil) for 5 minutes.

BABA AU RHUM

This typical French pastries will make an exquisite dessert. It is simple and fast to prepare.

Put a can unopened of small babas into boiling water. Wait 15 minutes. In a "coupe" place a ball of ice cream, and arrange few Babas around it. Pour the juice from the can and top with whipped cream.

That's it. Wait for the bravos.

question & answer

Q. Recently I dined in a Cuban restaurant in Hialeah, Fla. The best thing on the menu was a soup called fabada. Are you familiar with it?

A. The origin of the soup, I believe, is the Asturias region of northern Spain. The soup is made like any bean soup with white beans, salt pork, smoked bacon, ham hocks, beef, onions, green pepper, cloves, tomatoes, potatoes and the Spanish sausage known as morcillas. The sausages, for a genuine fabada, are essential.

Q. An acquaintance states that she traveled through Switzerland not long ago and ate a cheese called Appenzeller. She says that as far as she knows, it is another name for Gruyere. Are the two cheeses the same?

A. No. Both are excellent but they come from different regions of Switzerland and the production is different. I, frankly, prefer Gruyere for cooking and Appenzeller for eating as a cheese course.

I use Gruyere (and by this I mean genuine Gruyere, not the foil-wrapped processed triangles) for making sauces, for fondues and for sprinkling on certain dishes before baking. I use Appenzeller for salad with cheese, for fruit with cheese and so on.

Not to confuse matters, although both these cheeses are from Switzerland, they are not what is commonly called "Swiss cheese." That cheese with the large holes is known in Switzerland as Emmentaler and the best is from the Emmentaler (the name means Emme Valley).

Q. I have several times recently run across references to a "treacle pudding." What is treacle?

A. Treacle (pronounced TREE-kl) is a British term for a special kind of molasses. There are three kinds of treacle. Dark molasses is referred to as black treacle in England. There is also a medium-colored molasses and this, I am told, is the one that is generally referred to simply as treacle.

There is a third type that would be the equivalent of what is sold as golden syrup in North America. In England, treacle is used in preparing not only puddings but pies as well.

Tips on stalking asparagus

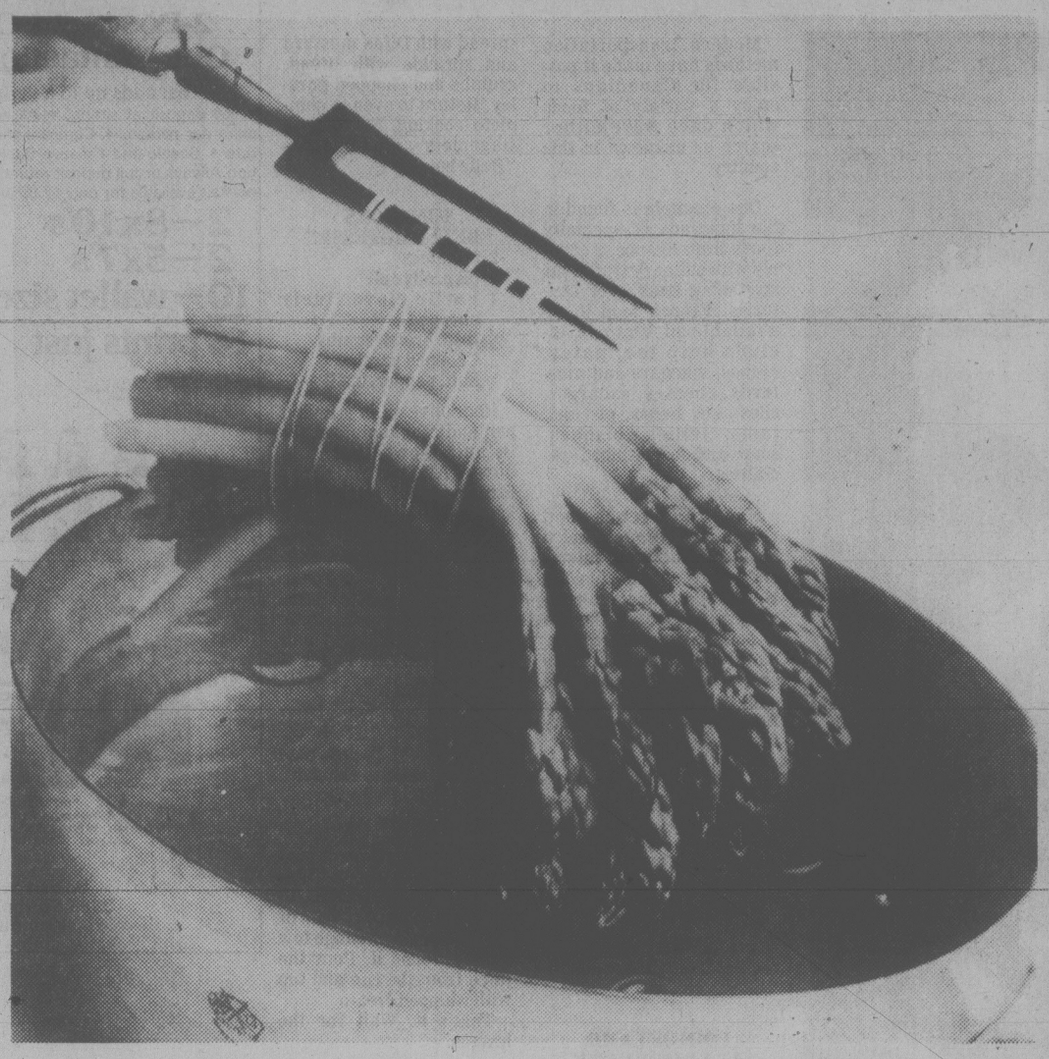
By PATRICIA SPENCER
Christian Science Monitor



Spring has come in earnest when the first slender stalks of asparagus appear in the market.

At the beginning of the season, asparagus is best served with just melted butter and lemon. Later on, when the stalks are thicker and not as tender, there are several sauces, often with an egg base, that are delicious with this vegetable.

There are two varieties of asparagus, white and green. White asparagus is prevalent all over Europe, but is more difficult to find in this country. The Germans are particularly proud of their crop of "spargel," which is grown without sunlight, producing a thick, ivory-white stalk.

Green asparagus is a rarity in Europe, but there is an abundance of it in the North America. The earliest stalks come from California, and later from a number of states including New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts.

When choosing asparagus at the market, select firm, crisp stalks with tips that are compact and tightly closed. The more open the tips, the closer the stalk was to flowering when picked. These older stalks are tougher and less sweet than the young ones.

There is a great difference of opinion as to how asparagus should be prepared and cooked. Perhaps the best advice is to try the various methods and decide which you prefer. Julia Child likes to peel the spears because they cook more quickly, retain their color and texture and can be eaten all the way down to the end. This is the French way of preparing asparagus.

After it is peeled, she ties the asparagus in a bundle of about twelve stalks each, one string near the tips and another near the end. Leave one spear loose to test as they cook.

The French method of cooking asparagus is to plunge the bundle in a large kettle of rapidly boiling, salted water, and boil it slowly, uncovered, until it is just tender, from 8 to 12 minutes. Lift asparagus out of the water, drain on paper towels and serve. If asparagus is to be eaten cold, plunge it in ice water for a few minutes to stop the cooking process.

Asparagus also may be steamed, and this method maintains almost all of the vegetable's nutrients. Put 1 to 2 inches of water in a 4-quart pot and place a collapsible steamer basket in the pot. Bring water to a boil over high heat and place trimmed asparagus in a single layer. Cover pot and cook until tender. Lift steamer from pot and serve asparagus immediately.

There is a special asparagus pot in which the stalks stand upright, with only their stems in water. The tips are cooked by the steam that rises from the boiling water. Some people find that a tall percolator works just as well. This method is particularly good for thick spears.

Asparagus also may be stir-fried in a wok, a method which is becoming more and more popular for cooking vegetables. If you like the taste of fresh ginger root, it makes a nice addition.

If you are not going to use asparagus immediately, store it in a plastic bag, tip end first, in the vegetable section of the refrigerator. If very fresh, it should last for two days.

Here are some recipes. The first, asparagus with a sauce made with coddled eggs, makes a nice, informal appetizer for a spring dinner.

ASPARAGUS WITH EGG SAUCE

- 4 eggs
- ½ cup butter
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- Salt and pepper
- 1 pound asparagus

Place eggs gently in pan of boiling water. Simmer over moderate heat for 5 minutes. Remove from heat and plunge in ice water. Remove shells. Egg whites should be just set.

Melt butter over low heat. In a medium bowl, mash eggs with a fork, and stir in butter, lemon juice and salt and pepper to taste.

ASPARAGUS STIRFRIED

- 1 pound asparagus
- 2 tablespoons oil
- 1 garlic clove, minced
- 1 teaspoon fresh ginger root, minced
- ¼ cup chicken stock
- 2 teaspoons soy sauce
- ½ teaspoon cornstarch
- Salt

Snap asparagus at breaking point. Cut diagonally into 1-inch lengths. Blanch in rapidly boiling salted water. Heat wok or large skillet over moderately high heat, add oil and heat until very hot.

Add garlic and ginger and stir-fry for several seconds. Add asparagus and stir-fry to coat with oil and heat through. Add stock, soy sauce and cornstarch and simmer for 2 to 3 minutes. Season to taste and serve. Serves 2.

CREAM OF ASPARAGUS SOUP

- 1 pound asparagus
- 4 cups chicken stock
- 1 small onion, finely chopped
- ½ cup chopped celery
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 2 egg yolks
- ⅓ cup cream

Snap asparagus at breaking point. Rinse and cut into 1-inch lengths, reserving tips. Simmer tips in small amount of water just until tender. Set aside. Place stalks in 3-quart saucepan with stock, onion and celery. Cover and bring to a boil. Reduce heat to medium low and simmer 10 minutes or until asparagus is tender. Pour soup into blender and puree at high speed about 30 seconds.

Melt butter in large saucepan over low heat. Stir in flour, salt and pepper. Cook 3 to 4 minutes, stirring constantly. Slowly add asparagus stock and heat through.

In small bowl, combine egg yolks and cream. Add about 2 cup of hot soup to egg mixture, stir well. Slowly add to soup stirring constantly over low heat. Do not let soup boil. Add asparagus tips. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve in soup bowls and garnish with chopped hard-cooked egg.

Here's a spaghetti to sing about

craig claiborne

One of the most curious omissions in books about cooking is the dish called spaghetti Caruso, named, of course, for the great Italian tenor.

Although there are many recipes for chicken Tetrazzini (another spaghetti dish, made with chicken in a cream sauce), named for the coloratura soprano Luisa Tetrazzini, recipes for spaghetti Caruso are quite rare. There is a recipe in James Beard's American Cookery (Little Brown, 1972) in which he specifies that spaghetti Caruso has a tomato-meat sauce topped with a few chicken livers that have been sauteed in butter.

That is the version that I have always presumed to be the true and original. A reader wrote recently, however, to dispute it:

"The late chef and cookbook author, Louis P. De Gouy," he writes, "who was European by birth and training but American by adoption, claims to have concocted this recipe." He referred me to De Gouy's The Gold Cook Book published by Greenberg (New York) in 1947. Sure enough, there is a recipe for "Spaghetti alla Caruso" and in parentheses it states, "Original recipe as prepared by this writer."

I am not at all convinced that this is the original version of spaghetti Caruso. I have a feeling that the original was made with chicken livers. In any event, here is De Gouy's recipe, adapted to conform with The New York Times recipe format.

Spaghetti alla Caruso

4 slices bacon, diced
¼ pound lean ham, diced
3 pounds lean beef
1 tablespoon confectioners' sugar
1 veal knuckle, split and rinsed well
2 or 3 leeks, trimmed, split, rinsed and tied in a bundle
1½ cups finely chopped celery
1½ cups finely chopped carrots
1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley
1 tablespoon finely chopped chervil, optional
2 bay leaves
2 sprigs fresh thyme or 1 teaspoon dried
2 cloves garlic, peeled and thinly sliced
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
4 whole cloves
4 sprigs fresh basil or 1 tablespoon dried
1 cup tomato paste
½ cup Marsala, Sherry or Madeira wine
1 medium-size truffle, sliced
¼ pound fresh mushrooms
2 pounds spaghetti, cooked according to taste
1 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese.

1. In an iron skillet cook the bacon and ham and transfer the pieces to a kettle or casserole. Leave the fat in the skillet.

2. Dredge the beef in the confectioners' sugar. Shake off excess. Brown the beef in the bacon fat left in the skillet. Turn it over and over until very brown and crusty. Add this to the kettle.

3. Add the veal knuckle, leeks, celery, carrots, parsley, chervil, bay leaves, thyme, garlic, salt and pepper to taste, cloves, basil and boiling water to cover. Cover and cook three to four hours or until the meat is falling apart.

4. Remove the bone and discard it. Strain the mixture, meat and all, pushing through to extract as much liquid and solids as possible. Discard any lumps and shreds. Add the tomato paste and wine. Bring to the simmer.

5. Cut the truffle slices into thin strips and add to the sauce. Chop the mushrooms and add them. Simmer until the spaghetti is cooked. cook. Let the sauce simmer

6. s the sauce simmers, put the spaghetti on to room stems and slice the mushroom caps and add them. Simmer until the spaghetti is cooked.

7. Drain the spaghetti and serve with the sauce. Serve sprinkled with Parmesan cheese.

Skirting a Scarsdale

partner's cookbook

By MIKE McGRADY

This year's hot new diet is called the Scarsdale Diet. One menu on the diet recommends "cottage cheese, cabbage and two eggs." Combinations like this one may well explain the diet's success. If that doesn't ruin your appetite, nothing ever will.

Here's a meal that may stretch any diet a little bit, but it shouldn't totally destroy it.

The Staples: Make sure these are all on hand: salt, pepper, butter, basil, thyme, oregano, garlic, rosemary, savory.

The Shopping List: two pounds of shrimp; whole wheat bread (one loaf); olive oil; one can beef bouillon; one bunch parsley; five large tomatoes; one bunch scallions; chives; carrots; celery; lemon; three grapefruit; grated parmesan cheese (four ounces).

Prepare in Advance: The seasoned bread crumbs.

It is, of course, possible to buy ready-made bread crumbs in the supermarket. But what you'll have here is high-nutrition bread crumbs.

The best starting point would be a loaf of whole wheat bread three or four days old. If the bread is still soft, dry it out in the oven. Spread the slices on a cookie tin in a 250-degree oven and when the bread is thoroughly dry, put it into the blender along with the grated parmesan cheese and the following seasonings: a large pinch of chopped parsley, some chopped chives; a pinch of basil, another of rosemary and one of savory. Blend together and store in a cool spot.

Also Prepare in Advance: The shrimp. Shell the shrimps and remove the veins. The shells will come off easily and the veins can be removed with either a sharp paring knife or a toothpick. Then — and here's an old dieter's trick designed to fool the eye — slice the shrimps in half lengthwise.

Place the shrimp halves in a flat baking dish. Add two-thirds of a cup of olive oil (sorry about that). Chop up three cloves of garlic and one-third of the parsley and add that. Then, a large pinch of oregano. Some salt and pepper. And a quarter of a cup of your seasoned bread crumbs.

Mix all this together and let it stand at room temperature for a couple of hours, or in the refrigerator overnight.

5:15 P.M.: In a pot with a tight cover melt half a stick of butter (oops, sorry again) over medium heat. Add a cup of dry brown rice and stir it until it browns slightly in the butter. Now add half an onion, chopped fine. Now add half an onion, chopped fine. And two and a half cups of liquid (the canned bouillon and water). While you are doing this, eat two raw carrots. Rice pilaf is one of those experimental dishes that invites varied additions. Chopped mushrooms, diced peppers, chopped scallions, minced parsley, crushed tomatoes — anything goes.

5:45 P.M.: Since we're using brown rice instead of white rice, the cooking time will be about twice the normal amount. Cover the pot tightly and cook the rice for about 45 minutes over a very low flame.

5:50 P.M.: And now, the tomatoes Provencal. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Rinse and dry the five large tomatoes. Using a sharp knife, cut a circle out of the top of each tomato. Spoon the pulp of the tomato into a mixing bowl. And then turn the tomato shells over so that they'll drain while you're putting together the filling.

Chop up the rest of your parsley and add that to the tomato pulp. Along with two cloves of garlic, minced fine. A pinch of thyme. The juice of half a lemon. Three scallions, chopped fine. A generous amount of salt and pepper. And enough of your seasoned bread crumbs to bind the mixture. Fill the tomato shells with the stuffing.

6:00 P.M.: Grease a casserole dish lightly, put the stuffed tomatoes in it and cover tightly. Place the covered dish in the preheated oven. Eat two stalks of celery.

6:30 P.M.: Increase oven heat to 450 degrees. Put the shrimps into the hot oven and remove the cover from the tomato casserole. Eat another carrot.

6:40 P.M.: Remove tomatoes from oven and keep warm. Check rice. Set the shrimp under a broiler for final five minutes. Eat another stalk of celery.

6:45 P.M.: Serve dinner. Go lightly with the shrimp but try not to count calories. A few shrimps, a little rice, as much tomato as you want. And for dessert, a half grapefruit, no sugar. Why that? That's just to keep you honest.

Use This Home Recipe Plan to Lose Ugly Fat

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of bulky unsightly fat right in your own home. Use this recipe plan yourself. It's easy — no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full twice a day and follow the Naran plan.

If your first purchase does not show you the simple, easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't seem to disappear almost like magic from neck; chin, arms, bust, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow the easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears — how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Surf and turf an old blend

A good many years ago, the first time I saw the words "surf and turf" on a menu, I was puzzled. When it was explained to me that it meant lobster and steak served together, I was amused because it seemed such a bizarre and unlikely combination.

When I got around to sampling the dish, it turned out to be not such a bad combination at all. Since my initiation into the marriage of shellfish with meat or poultry, I have encountered many similar liaisons in the world of cuisine.

Veal Oskar links a broiled veal chop with (in this country, at least) crab meat or shrimp plus asparagus spears and hollandaise sauce. The Chinese kitchen often combines poultry and other meats with various kinds of seafood: stir-fried chicken shreds with jellyfish; ham and chicken and shrimp in paper packages, and so on.

I realized that the surf and turf concept was actually very old. One of the most often-quoted anecdotes about French cookery has to do with chicken Marengo.

It seems that Napoleon's chef, after the battle of Marengo in Italy, scoured the countryside and came up with a dish composed of all the ingredients he could find in one afternoon: a chicken, crawfish, garlic, tomatoes and eggs. All of these he combined, and the result was the Marengo creation. Few chefs today add the crawfish and fried egg garnish, but traditionally they should be included.

I was recently in an experimental mood and I brought together an assortment of foods I found in the refrigerator, including breast of chicken, mushrooms and shrimp. Plus about a pint of fresh tomato sauce left over from the evening before.

I cut the chicken into shreds, sauteed them along with the sliced mushrooms and shrimp and stirred in the tomato sauce. The end result was tasty enough. An acquaintance had stopped by and asked for a glass of Pernod and since the bottle was at my elbow, I added a splash of that. The dish, as it turned out, was neither East nor West, but it was different, good and easy to prepare in less than half an hour's time.

BLANC de VOLAILLE aux CREVETTES ROSES
(Sauteed chicken breast with shrimp)

1 pound raw shrimp.

3 tablespoons butter.

Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.

2 tablespoons finely chopped shallots.

2 cups fresh tomato sauce (see recipe).

1 tablespoon Pernod or Ricard liqueur.

1. Split the chicken breasts lengthwise in half. Cut away all fibers, membranes and bits of extraneous fat.

2. Place each breast half on a flat surface and cut the meat into half-inch strips. Set aside.

3. Peel the shrimp and run under cold water to remove the black vein. Drain well.

4. Rinse the mushrooms, pat dry and slice thinly.

5. Heat two tablespoons of the butter in a large, wide, heavy skillet and add the chicken. Cook over high heat, stirring, about one minute. Add the mushrooms, salt and pepper to taste. Cook, stirring, about one minute.

6. Add the shrimp and cook, stirring, about one minute or just until the shrimp turn red.

7. Using a slotted spoon, transfer the ingredients to a casserole. Leave any liquid or fat in the skillet.

8. To the liquid or fat add the shallots and cook briefly. Add the wine and cook until it is reduced to about half a cup.

9. Add the tomato sauce and bring to the boil.

10. Add the shrimp-mushroom-chicken mixture. Return to the boil, stirring, and swirl in the remaining tablespoon of butter. Stir in the Pernod or Ricard and serve.

Yield: 4 servings.

SAUCE TOMATE
(Fresh tomato sauce)

¾ pound fresh tomatoes.

1 tablespoon butter.

½ cup finely chopped onion.

1 teaspoon finely chopped garlic.

1 bay leaf.

Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.

1. Cut out the cores of the tomatoes. Cut the tomatoes into cubes. There should be about two cups.

2. Heat the butter in a saucepan and add the onion and garlic. Cook, stirring, until wilted and add the tomatoes, bay leaf, salt and pepper to taste. Cover and cook about 10 minutes.

3. Scrape the sauce into the container of a food processor. Process well.

4. Place a sieve in a large measuring cup and scrape the sauce into the sieve. Press the sauce through the sieve. Discard the solids.

Yield: About 2 cups.

LOSE 5-14 LBS. IN NEXT TWO WEEKS WITH THE HELP OF THE
NO NONSENSE DIET

In May of 1979 Natures own no nonsense diet was introduced to British Columbians and Albertans through the Prince Health Food chain. Within weeks they were sold out and by the end of July thousands of people had lost weight the no nonsense way.

Unlike most diets to have come along this one is not dying out, but gaining greater momentum all the time. The reason for this phenomenal growth lies inthe fact that those people who have tried the diet have gotten positive results. For example I know of one particular young lady who has been overweight nearly all of her life. She wanted desperately to lose 25 lbs., and tried every possible means over the last two years. She exercised, joined clubs and went to monthly meetings. All to no avail. After reading about the no nonsense diet, she decided to give it a try before throwing in the towel. It worked. Within a month she lost 23 lbs., within two more weeks she lost another 10 lbs. She is so ecstatic about this diet that she preaches it to anyone who will listen and has most of her friends on it.

The product is a dieter's dream; two tablespoons in a glass of partially skimmed milk is equal in nutrition to a complete meal. But without all those nasty little calories. It has all the essential amino acids, and Vitamins and Minerals in a delicious powder base. The no nonsense formula comes in two flavours, luscious chocolate and tasty vanilla.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Vitamin A | Vitamin E | Vitamin C | Vitamin D |
| Thiamin | Riboflavin | Niacin B6, B12 | Folid Acid Biotin |
| Choline | Calcium | Phosphorous | Iron |
| Iodine | Magnesium | Copper | Zinc |
| Potassium | Manganese | Sodium | d-Panothenic Acid |

This is a wonderful diet because you are dealing with natural foods and not drugs, consequently it is safe and very healthy. A lot of people after going on this diet, have noticed remarkable improvement in their hair, skin and nails.

Pasta tradition lands in B.C. with the Italians

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pasta, that old Italian favorite, is fast becoming more widely used in this country, thanks to Italian-Canadian communities.

It once simply meant macaroni and spaghetti to English-Canadians, but now it is widely used in lasagna, fettucine, linguine, green noodles and manicotti.

Essentially, pasta is made from a simple dough using semolina, a granular flour made from hard durum wheat, along with water and sometimes egg, depending on the type of pasta.

The dough is forced through perforated plates or discs to form the desired shape. Colored pasta comes from the addition of spinach or tomatoes to the dough.

It's hard to get an accurate count of the many different types of pasta, but most authorities list more than 50. They include noodles of all different widths, rings, turrets, stars, wagon wheels, shells and tubes of varying sizes.

The inventive cook can have a fine time playing with pasta. Throw the small ones into soups to give them more character and staying power.

Attilio Gioe, who owns a pasta shop, says linguine and fettucine are his biggest sellers.

"Some customers buy as much as five pounds at a time and keep it in the freezer," he said.

Fresh pasta, unlike dried packaged types, has a short shelf life — two or three days — but can be frozen for several months.

While it is cooked the same way as dried pasta — in lots of boiling salted water — it takes only two or three minutes to reach the correct "al dente" stage.

Gioe said that "you'd be surprised how many people make cannelloni when they discover that they don't have to stuff all those shells."

"If you cut them into slices after cooking, you can roll them around your fillings for cannelloni" and seal them with beaten egg, he said. "It's a lot faster and easier than trying to stuff the filling into ready-formed pasta."

To avoid sticky, overcooked pasta, buy quality products. For every pound of pasta, use four quarts of water and two tablespoons of salt.

Bring the water to a full boil and slip the pasta into the water gradually so that the water continues to boil. Don't cover; stir frequently.

One tablespoon of cooking oil or butter added to the water prevents boilovers and prevents the pasta from sticking together.

Leftover, cooked pasta can be frozen for up to a month. Cool and pack into a plastic bag and seal. Reheat by emptying the frozen contents into rapidly boiling water. Stir, drain and serve with sauce.

For a delicate, rich flavor, toss cooked pasta with unsalted butter before serving. Either melt the butter while the pasta cooks, or shave hard butter into cooked pasta so that it absorbs quickly.

Cup of U.K. to B.C.

By PAT DUFOUR

Meeting home economist Carroll Nelson this week was to indulge in a nostalgic kick.

I thought of my old school in Britain, the gymslips that were measured at the beginning of each term in order to ensure they were the regulation 4½ inches above the knee.

I remembered grass hockey practices carried out before classes with the dew still fresh on the ground.

These and other long-hidden memories came back as we chatted. It wasn't Carroll herself that roused them. It was the product she is promoting which did the trick — Horlicks.

Almost as British as the Union Jack, the malted food drink base has been a household favorite in Britain since the 1870s.

When William Horlicks decided to incorporate whey powder from milk into Horlicks in 1883 Horlicks Malted Milk was regularly prescribed by doctors to be used by babies and invalids.

It soon, however, became a hit with adults and children of all ages and has long been accepted as the panacea for those who have sleeping problems.

I can't remember having sleeping problems in those days but I still recall how smoothly Horlicks slipped down.

I was astonished to hear from Carroll that it was Mrs. O'Leary's cow, that kicked over a lamp and started the great Chicago fire of 1871, that really helped start the Horlicks empire.

Horlicks and his pharmacist brother James had emigrated from England, where the latter had learned to make a food from malt and wheat that could be used with milk or water.

William Horlick was a stone and gravel company employee in Wisconsin at the time of the Chicago fire and the resulting boom in the construction industry allowed him to save enough money to help James to launch his Horlicks Food project.

Horlicks helped nourish such Antarctic explorers as Amundsen, Shackleton and Scott. Norway's King Haakon bestowed the knighthood of the Order of St. Olaf on William for the Horlicks received by Amundsen and other Norwegian explorers.

James returned to Britain and set up a factory there in 1906. During the First World War the American operation came to the rescue, keeping Britain's canteens, hospitals in supply and providing emergency rations for the troops.

In 1945 the English company was bought out the American operation, now being run by James' nephews. In the late 1960s the company was bought by the British Becham firm, which decided not to sell any more Horlicks in Canada.

Since then, Carroll says, the company has been beleagured with requests to have the product put back on the Canadian market.

Most of those requests came from British Columbians who probably, like myself, relate a warming mug of Horlicks as much with nostalgia as nourishment.

B.C. will be the only province, at least for a while, to be supplied with the British favorite. It is already on supermarket shelves and selling at $2:67 for a 400 gram bottle.

Anyone for a cuppa for old-times sake?

Salvador youth slain during bullet surgery

SAN SALVADOR (UPI) — Gunmen shot and killed a man on a hospital operating table and other suspected terrorists decapitated two peasants in El Salvador's increasingly grisly political violence.

Treasury Minister Roberto Albergue Vides, an attorney, resigned his post Tuesday to "pursue personal activities," becoming the fourth cabinet member to quit the government in the last six weeks.

Authorities said the decapitated and torture-marked bodies of a man and a woman were found near the town of Tecoluca, 106 kilometres east of San Salvador. The man's head was jammed into a sewage pipe and the woman's head was tied by her long hair to a tree near her body, they said.

In another ghoulish incident, three gunmen burst into a hospital operating room in the town of Usulutan, 108 km east of the capital, and fired three bullets into the head of a youth undergoing surgery for a bullet wound, killing him, authorities said.

Assault for sore eyes?

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — A physician who cut a power cord to television lights during a speech by Gov. Dixy Lee Ray says he plans to press charges against television stations KEPR and KNDU for "premeditated assault the governor".

Dr. Robert Luckey, a plastic surgeon, said he cut the cord thinking the lights were hurting Ray's eyes.

Executions over: Doe

MONROVIA (AP) — Liberian leader Samuel Doe, faced with clemency appeals from the pope, the United Nations and elsewhere, promised Tuesday hjs military government will execute no more officials of the ousted government of president William Tolbert.

A firing squad last week killed 13 top members of the Tolbert administration. Tolbert himself was slain in a Doe-led military coup that toppled his government April 12.

In a statement to cabinet ministers, diplomats and reporters summoned to Monrovia's executive mansion, Master Sgt. Doe acknowledged he had received many appeals from inside and outside the country to spare the lives of more than 80 Tolbert officials still to be tried for treason, corruption and violation of human rights, the charges on the basis of which the 13 were executed.

The military tribunal of officers handed down death sentences for only four of the 13 executed last week, and acquitted two. Doe's People's Redemption Council overruled the tribunal and had all 13 shot.

"When our people call upon this government to stop the executions related to the April 12 revolution, we have no other choice but to say to our people and to the entire world that, as for this government, there will be no more executions," Doe said.

He said his government had received pleas for clemency from Pope John Paul, UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, the human rights group Amnesty International, African chiefs of state "and many other individuals, international organizations and governments." U.S. Ambassador Robert Smith appealed repeatedly for clemency.

It's treat time at the festival

By AUDREY JOHNSON

This is a week of special events in the Victoria Music Festival.

As the year's great music and dance talent showcase moves into its final phase, championship events and honor performance concerts occupy evening spots.

A special treat for audiences attending the Friday piano championship session will be a performance of the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 2 by the astonishing 19-year-old artist, Miranda Wong.

Miranda, who achieved a unique 97 marks from conservative adjudicators for her open performance program (highest mark in the festival) tied with Kevin Fitz-Gerald as winner of the open concerto class on Tuesday, both receiving 88. One mark behind was Arthur LaVertu in second place.

Vocal championships take place Thursday evening at St. Andrew's Kirk Hall, culminating with the senior/open competition for the B.C. Electric Rose Bowl. Performances begin at Kirk Hall with the junior final contest at 7:30 p.m.

The School Dance honor performance opens at the same time Thursday at Central Junior Secondary. Organizer for this years'event — one of the most popular in the festival — is Mrs. Jean Bunch.

The event promises to be a true feast of color, movement and music, with the following schools participating: Glenlyon, Torquay, Brentwood College, Monterey, Fairburn, Willows, Uplands and Cedar Hill Junior Secondary.

Conclusion Friday evening of the massive piano section presents junior, intermediate, senior and open championships. It takes place at First United Church Fellowship Hall on Balmoral starting at 8.

There are several outstanding pianists at the open performance level, any one of whom is worth any true music lover leaving his armchair and stereo to hear.

On Monday the Highlights Concert at McPherson Playhouse will provide a sampling of the many performances that have thrilled, charmed and even awed adjudicators and audiences during the two festival weeks.

The concert is being carefully programmed and timed to make a diverse, representative event, designed to interest and entertain and last exactly the ideal two hours.

Detailed, helpful and friendly adjudications are being provided for string entrants this week by Tom Rolston, whose wife Isobel is one of the two highly competent but very different piano adjudicators.

Rolston is director of music at the Banff School of Fine Arts. He is an adjudicator who cares and is sympathetic even while he probes revealingly to uncover weaknesses, and point out different approaches to problems. At the same time he is generous in his praise of accomplishment.

In Tuesday's classes the under-12 age group was walking away with the show. Seven-year-old violinist Sara Tyrrell, who made a striking debut in last year's festival, is back and scoring 90s steadily.

Highly placed also have been Amanda Lee, Shelley Matkin, Heather Dong, Nonalee Dong, Maxwell Ngai, Hilary Wallis, Emlyn Ngai, Kristopher Holm, Alan Horgan, Alasdair Money, Paul Des Roches, Lorien Benet and Zoe Williams, none of whom have scored less than an 88.

Other string performances as well as brass, woodwind and band events will be discussed in the next festival report.

TWA settles

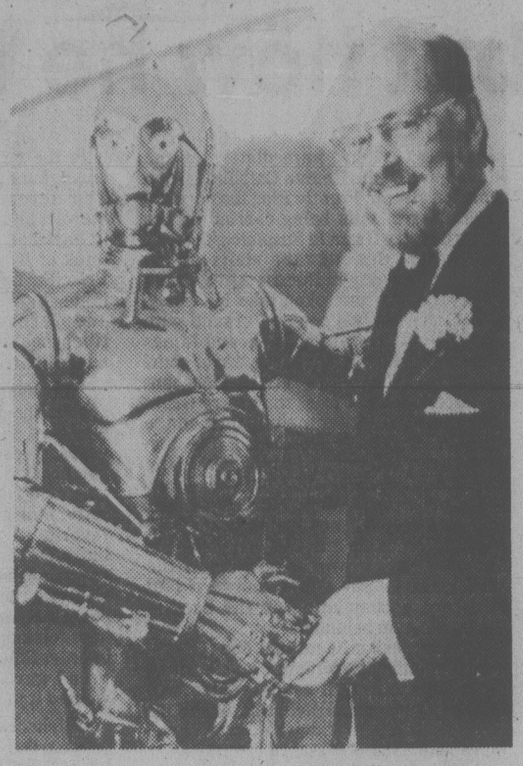
WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — A $370,000 settlement has been reached between Trans World Airlines and 25 persons who were held hostage by Palestinian terrorists for 22 days in 1970. Awards in the out-of-court settlement ranged from $17,500 for a single person to a combined $80,000 for six members of the Benjamin Feinstein family.



Well done, maestro C3PO!

New Boston Pops conductor John Williams was first to congratulate actor dressed in the gold armor of the Star Wars android C3PO at a news conference following opening night Tuesday.

The actor led the the 100-member orchestra in the Star Wars movie theme, which was composed by Williams.

Hitchcock film: not the story but how he tells it

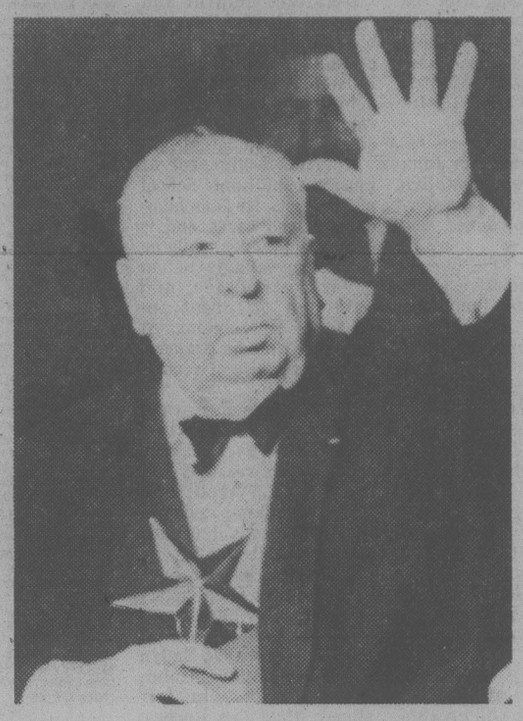
By VINCENT CANBY
New York Times

NEW YORK — It was the great good fortune of Alfred Hitchcock to be enormously successful throughout his long career, so much so that he wasn't recognized as a master film maker until comparatively late in life.

Working exclusively within the popular cinema, restricting his work mostly to films of suspense relating to greed, psychosis or international intrigue, Hitchcock transformed things given into things unknown, the commonplace experience into the exotic breakthrough. The realization of his genius crept up on us without warning. It jumped out from the dark of thousands of movie theatres, surprising and delighting us because his films are so much fun, so exhilarating. How could they be serious?

Serious is a dangerous and dreary word to use to describe the sorts of films Hitchcock turned out so meticulously and with such well-ordered regularity over nearly 60 years. His films certainly aren't ponderous or slow or solemn, but in the way they deal with ordinary people in crises, they demonstrate the kind of consistent vision of the world that separates the great film makers from the merely good and competent.

The world just outside the Hitchcock frame, and sometimes inside it, is dark indeed, and this awareness fuels not a despair but an insatiable and amused curiosity about what else can possibly go wrong. He chose to devote himself to the sorts of efforts that Graham Greene calls "entertainments."



Hitchcock's films are the most essential kind of narratives, about events and what happens next, and though the stories are important, what keeps us returning to a Hitchcock film is not the story but how he tells it.

Hitchcock was a master of style. His unheard voice in any movie is as unmistakable as his image that is always seen, though fleetingly. The manner has sometimes been called cruel, which is, I think, a purblind way of saying that it's unsentimental, as when, in the interests of the plot of the 1936 Sabotage, called The Woman Alone in the United States, he didn't hesitate to let the time bomb blow up the innocent younger brother of the heroine, played by Sylvia Sidney.

Though his films are virtually seamless in their construction and as efficient as sonnets in their use of words, he could be prodigal in his use of talent if that answered some need greater than production bookkeeping. Each time I see Psycho I'm surprised again by his violent dispatch of Janet Leigh, one of the stars, before the picture is half over.

All of us remember favorite Hitchcock sequences. I think immediately of the kidnapping of the Roman Catholic bishop from his altar in Family Plot; the possibly fatal glass of milk being carried up the stairs by Cary Grant in Suspicion; the way the camera descends the stairs of the German embassy in Buenos Aires in one long, stunning, unbroken take in Notorious; Grace Kelly's popping around with dinner from 21 for the house-bound James Stewart in Rear Window; the awful gourmet meal prepared by Vivien Merchant for Alec McCowen in Frenzy; Cary Grant and Eva Marie Saint making love on the train in North by Northwest; the moment in To Catch a Thief when the incomparably cool and beautiful Grace Kelly, after an evening of civilized dinner talk, suddenly reaches up and kisses Cary Grant good night on the lips, and the innocent young woman sitting in the schoolyard in The Birds, unaware that birds are accumulating on the bars of the jungle gym behind her.

It is not insignificant that one remembers the comic, the romantic and the moving moments as well as one remembers the terrifying ones. Hitchcock, for all his emphasis on who did what, was much more than a manipulator of events.

His landscapes are inhabited by extraordinary characters who are so completely embodied by the people who play them that we tend to confuse the actor with the character. Grace Kelly hardly exists outside the cinema of Hitchcock. The screen personalities of James Stewart and Cary Grant were permanently enriched by Hitchcock films. When I think of Kim Novak, Robert Cummings, Priscilla Lane, Joel McCrea, Joan Fontaine, Ingrid Bergman, Farley Granger and Teresa Wright, I think of their Hitchcock films. So much for Hitchcock's alleged hatred of actors.

The death of Alfred Hitchcock is a special shock. I had somehow assumed he would go on forever and that, every few years, I could look forward to a new Hitchcock film. This would also mean that he would come to New York for a visit, settle himself in his favorite chair, in his favorite suite at the St. Regis, and meet the members of the press, one by one, from morning till night, enjoying himself richly as he undoubtedly told the same stories again and again, adding a detail here, cleaning up some others there, forever refining anecdotes that, put end to end, gave the public just the picture he wanted it to have of him.

Hitchcock was not a secretive man but he guarded his privacy as he did his talent. That is, with grace and wit and the awareness that, just beyond the well-lighted centre of things, there exists the mysterious, unfathomable void.

Nobody like him: Stewart

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Master of suspense, storyteller par excellence, a director of consummate professionalism who found time to relax his players with a good yarn or a joke.

The accolades poured in Tuesday as Hollywood learned of the death of Sir Alfred Hitchcock, but were perhaps best summed up by actor James Stewart: "There was nobody like him, and he'll be very hard to replace."

"I have lost a great friend, and the world has lost a man who made a tremendous contribution to our business," said Stewart, who starred in Hitchcock's Rear Window, The Man Who Knew Too Much and Vertigo.

"I think his humor was the most unique thing about him," said actor Henry Fonda, who starred in Hitchcock's 1956 film, The Wrong Man.

"I feel very fortunate to have worked with him. He was a totally delightful man. Not only was he a great man, he was a wonderful, wonderful man to know, and I knew him well."

Janet Leigh, who appeared in the chilling shower stabbing scene in Psycho, said she too remembered the director for his humor.

"Whenever we did see each other, he had a wonderful little story to tell. Certainly he was a master at his profession."

Actress Tippi Hedren, who began her film career in Hitchcock's The Birds in 1963, also remembered Hitchcock's little stories.

"The man was of course a master storyteller, unequalled," Miss Hedren said. "He knew exactly what he wanted from his characters before he started filming. His sense of humor on the set was wonderful. He would tell you a story just before going on, to relax you."

"He plotted his pictures so thoroughly that the assistant directors and script supervisors knew exactly what it was going to be before the shot. Not only was he a great director in every way, but in the other way that so many directors don't excel — that is in use of camera and the concept of using film."

Hitchcock "always executed his suspense with taste," said Psycho co-star Anthony Perkins.

"He never offended you. You were scared by it, but pleasantly."

At Universal Studios, where Hitchcock maintained his production company for years, Lew Wasserman, board chairman and chief executive officer of Universal parent MCA Inc. said Hitchcock's death "deprives us all of a great artist and an even greater human being."

Scientists uncover interstellar 'super bubble'

By DAVID F. SALISBURY
Christian Science Monitor

BOULDER, COLO. — Interstellar matter is violent and frothy — quite different from the textbook description of cold dust clouds floating serenely among warm tenuous gases.

This has been illustrated dramatically by the recent, and totally unexpected, discovery of the "super bubble." It is the largest object yet found in the galaxy.

This mass of superheated gases is surrounded by a cooler and denser gaseous shell over 1,000 light years in diameter. At a temperature of 3.5 million degrees F., its gases hold a staggering amount of energy — 10 times the total energy generated by the sun since its formation 4.6 billion years ago. Extrapolating backward from the bubble a current rate of expansion, the discoverers — Webster Cash of the University of Colorado and Philip Charles of the University of California at Berkeley — figure it must be at least 3 million years old.

This particular super bubble is located near Cygnus, the Swan. If it were visible, which it is not, the bubble would fit above the constellation somewhat like a crown. This new feature is about 6,000 light years from our solar system and on the opposite side of a large dust cloud called the Rift of Cygnus.

The energy source underlying the bubbles is thought to be supernovae exploding stars. These are massive, very bright stars which evolve rapidly to a point where they throw off much of their matter in a tremendous explosion. According to one estimate, a supernova emits as much energy in one second as the sun produces in 10 years.

Cash and Charles believe such explosions are frequent enough to keep the interstellar medium violently mixed. Shock waves from these cosmic detonations create regions of superheated gases in the space between the stars. These regions have been detected before, but on a much smaller scale than that of the super bubble.

"Before, it was assumed that the suprnovae went off randomly and the shockwave pattern would interact to form a series of 'tunnels' of superheated gas," Cash said. "Now we know that this assumption was wrong." Instead, the very existence of the super bubble suggests that there is a complex interaction between these shock fronts and the process of star formation.

The astronomers explored the possibility that the super bubble may have been caused by a single extraordinarily large stellar explosion. But the details of the bubble structure are not what would be expected if that had been the case. Instead, the scientists think the giant bubble has been blown up gradually by as many as 100 individual supernovae.

Given the average rate of supernovae explosions for galaxies similar to ours, the probability that such a large number of supernovae should occur randomly in this particular region of space is quite small. However, the Rift is a dense cloud of dust and gas, 600 by 1,200 light years across, which contains enough material to make several million stars.

Cash believes the edge of the bubble, passing through the Rift, induced formation of a large number of new stars. Of these, he thinks a certain percentage ultimately became supernovae, providing the energy to blow the bubble even larger.

Besides the super bubble itself, there is other evidence to support this contention. Shining through the obscuring clouds of the Rift is a group of unusual stars--the "Cygnus OB2" association. These are extremely bright young stars. They are so bright, in fact, that were the Rift not obscuring them, they would be as bright as the Pleiades even though 15 times farther away. Because they are a million years younger than the super bubble itself, Cash believes their formation probably was stimulated by its impact.

"This is a very efficient process for the forming of new stars. Odds are that the sun was formed at the edge of such a super bubble 4.5 billion years ago," Cash said.

Super bubbles were not discovered sooner because they are so hot they emit X-rays rather than visible light. Only in recent years, with the orbiting of X-ray observing satellites, have astronomers been able to study the sky at all thoroughly, using such short wave lengths.

Counting Saturn's moons an astronomical problem

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just as a master juggler challenges viewers to count the balls he's tossing, the planet Saturn is confounding astronomers who are trying to count the number of moons spinning around the ringed planet.

Ask an astronomer these days how many moons Saturn has and you might get the answer nine, 10, 13 or even 18. But none will be definite, even though scientists are more sure of the numbers now than they were a few months ago.

"The situation has been rather confused, but I think we know what it is now," Dr. Brian Marsden of the Harvard-Smithsonian Centre for Astrophysics in Cambridge, Mass., said.

Evidence of new moons began coming in last September when the Pioneer 11 spacecraft gave man his first closeup view of the ringed planet 800 million nautical miles away.

Pictures from the unmanned American craft showed one new satellite, but other instruments indicated the presence of other moons. The spacecraft discovered "wakes" in fields of charged particles that are believed caused by moons passing through the fields.

Then, in October, the planets lined up so that Saturn's thin rings appeared edge-on to the earth. This orientation, which occurs every 13 to 15 years, makes locating small satellites easier.

Reports of sightings poured into the Cambridge centre, which gathers information for the International Astronomical Union in an attempt to co-ordinate diverse observations.

Astronomers worldwide sent in claims, sometimes giving names and numbers to their objects that other persons had already used. And there is confusion as to whether separate observers reported the same object.

Marsden is sorting out the reports and believes he's cleared up the confusion about names. Now scientists are waiting for observations to be confirmed so they will know how many moons Saturn has.

"As an absolute minimum, there seems to be about 13, if you believe all of these observations," Marsden said in a telephone interview. "There is a very small possibility of 18, but it isn't likely."

The question of Saturn's moons appeared to have been settled in 1898, when American astronomer William Pickering discovered the ninth moon, Phoebe.

In 1966, French astronomer Audoin Dollfus claimed discovery of a 10th moon, which he named Janus. But attempts to confirm Janus' location were equivocal and the Pioneer spacecraft failed to find it where it should have been.

An 11th satellite also was sighted in 1966, the last time Saturn was edge-on to the earth.

Some of the uncertainty about Saturn's satellites may be resolved in November when the more sophisticated Voyager 1 spacecraft passes the planet, followed the next year by Voyager 2.

The migration enigma: It's a complex caper

By BAYARD WEBSTER
New York Times

NEW YORK — Scientists believe they are edging closer to understanding the enigma of bird migration. Evidence is accumulating on how interlocking forces, circumstances and capabilities cause a bird to begin and endure its grueling journey of perhaps thousands of miles and then help it to unerringly locate its destination.

Recent findings, such as the discovery that birds are sensitive to magnetism and ultraviolet light and may use them as directional aids, have heightened interest in the mysteries of migration, drawing more and more ornithologists, zoologists, animal behaviorists and ecologists to the study of bird movement.

The scientists' curiosity and research is intensified at this time of year because the annual North American spring migration to summer breeding grounds has begun to fill the skies in the major flyways. Robins, grackles, flickers and red-winged blackbirds have already appeared on suburban lawns and fields, and some V-formation flights of geese and ducks have passed overhead.

It is one of nature's most spectacular events, in which scores of species, some 10 billion birds, migrate from their wintering areas in South and Central America and the southern United States to the north. The spring migration began in late February and will reach its peak in mid-May.

The intricacy and vast scope of the scientific puzzle can be seen from the host of different factors that have recently been discovered and are believed to play roles in bird navigation. These include celestial navigation using the sun, moon and stars; sensitivity to the earth's magnetic field and gravitational pull; awareness of sounds, smells and sights indigenous to a bird's geographical goal; and the use of temperature and barometric pressure changes, prevailing winds and ultraviolet and polarized light.

Also, the possibility has been raised that birds, like bats, may reckon their position by the time-response of their calls reflected from earth.

An experiment that demonstrated the tremendous navigational capabilities of one bird species, but raised questions at the same time, involved Manx Shearwaters, which nest on the island of Skokholm off Wales. The work was reported by Roger Pasquier of the International Council for Bird Preservation in his recently published book, Watching Birds.

A Shearwater had been taken from its nesting area to Boston, 4,900 kilometres away, a completely strange area for the species. The bird returned to its nesting site in 12½ days.

Similar feats by other sea birds and small land birds have been recorded. They lead ornithologists to wonder what devices a bird uses to fly over strange lands or seas when it has no apparent visual landmarks to steer by and sees only strange sun, star and moon configurations, and encounters unaccustomed winds, sounds, smells, pressures and gravitational and magnetic forces.

Scientists at Cornell University have shown that pigeons, which have been called the "white rats" of the bird world because they are so widely used in research, use a kind of celestial "radar" or clock that locates the moon, even in daylight. The researchers, releasing the birds at different times of the day or night, found that the pigeons changed their initial bearing toward "home" in response to the changing positions of the moon.

In what some scientists regard as the most significant recent finding, researchers have reported that pigeons' heads contain magnetite, an iron oxide that has magnetic properties. Other scientists found that pigeons had difficulty orienting themselves when coils were attached to their heads to produce magnetism different from the earth's magnetic field at the site. And in a room shielded from all magnetic radiation, the birds fluttered aimlessly.

Experiments with indigo buntings by Stephen T. Emlen, a zoologist at Cornell, have shown that the birds use star patterns in the night sky as navigational aids. The birds were put in chambers that simulated the fall and winter star patterns. No matter which way the pattern was turned over their heads, the birds always tried to take off in a north or south direction as shown by the simulated star positions, depending on the season of the year.

The sense of smell also appears to play a role in the bird's navigational system. Pigeons whose olfactory organs had been removed were found to have greater difficulty in homing than control pigeons that still had their sense of smell. And some experiments with sea birds have shown that they are able to recognize their home island even in a dense fog, apparently from its odor.

Other experiments have shown that some birds can use barometric pressure and gravitational force changes as guideposts on their flights. It has also been found that hummingbirds and pigeons can "see" ultraviolet light and polarized light, the rays that hit particles or moisture in the atmosphere and then emanate in a plane at right angles to the sun's rays, enabling them to determine the position of the sun on overcast days.

Birds are known to have keen eyesight and hearing, and tests have indicated that infrasounds, the low-frequency sounds that man cannot hear and that travel hundreds of miles, can be heard by birds. Scientists reason that such low-frequency sounds in the roar of the ocean surf can carry for miles and act as aural landmarks for birds.

Botha blasts boycott as hundreds arrested

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — South African police stepped up action against colored (mixed race) children involved in a two-week anti-apartheid classroom boycott, landing more than 750 Johannesburg students in court Tuesday.

As Prime Minister Pieter Botha warned organizers they could be hurt if the boycott continues, police in the colored Johannesburg area of Westbury broke up a demonstration of about 1,000 children Tuesday by arresting hundreds of students.

Within hours the students were marched into a local magistrates court with their parents where they were remanded until May 13 and released into the custody of their parents.

By early evening 758 children had appeared before the magistrate and more were being held until their parents arrived.

All face charges under the Riotous Assemblies Act, a police spokesman said.

Botha told parliament Tuesday the government will oppose those who seek to push it around "from behind the uniforms of schoolchildren.

"I want to warn those people. They are going to get hurt and if there are some unfortunate consequences, they must not come with recriminations later."

Despite a decrease in support, the boycott to protest against racially separated education, which started in Cape Town and spread country-wide, has gripped colored schools throughout the country involving more than 100,000 students, mostly aged between 13 and 18.

So far outbreaks of violence have been sporadic and demonstrations mainly peaceful, though police have used tear gas and baton charges to disperse a number of gatherings.

The protest has been confined chiefly to colored schools. White, black and Indian students at a number of universities and schools have expressed solidarity but there has been no widespread support of the boycott by the country's four million black schoolchildren.

In 1976, black protest against the education system led to violent confrontation with police which began in the huge Johannesburg satellite city of Soweto and flared across the country, leaving about 600 dead.

Yak dung smoke curls from world's rooftop

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Cliff Davidson travelled from this steelmaking city with its reputation for pollution to the rooftop of the world — the Himalayas — in search of purer skies.

But the environmental researcher found Nepal's Sherpa tribesmen are plagued with their own brand of pollution — smoke from burning yak dung.

"The air around the Himalayas is not as pristine as you might think," Davidson, a Carnegie-Mellon University assistant professor, said in a recent interview.

With a small grant from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Davidson, 29, measured air pollution near Everest, the world's tallest mountain.

"We were surprised that the area is as smoky as it is," he said. "It's definitely not the cleanest air on the planet."

The Sherpas, noted for their mountain-climbing skills, also cope with wood smoke and small quantities of industrial-age pollutants such as lead particles. Lead probably drifts on the wind from Nepal's capital, Katmandu, roughly 160 kilometres from Everest, Davidson said.

Worse not to have tried, says frustrated Carter

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Carter, clearly frustrated by his failure to win the release of American hostages through diplomatic and other means, defended his ill-fated rescue operation Tuesday night as an unavoidable but sadly-flawed option.

However, it would have been a bigger failure not to have launched the rescue mission in the first place, the president said in a nationally-broadcast news conference — his first since the rescue attempt was cancelled late last week:

"This is a sentiment shared with the men who went on this mission."

Carter vowed to keep trying peaceful means to win freedom for the 53 Americans held for nearly six months in Iran, while stressing the near-impossibility of dealing rationally "with inhumane people who have no respect for international law."

And he condemned the "desecration" of the bodies of the Americans killed in the foiled mission.

Despite a pledge from Iran's president Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, the bodies were displayed by the militants. Carter called this "a horrible exhibition of inhumanity."

In Tehran, meanwhile, Iranian officials were up to more of what Carter called "ghoulish" behavior.

The fire-blackened foot of one of the eight American servicemen who died in the rescue attempt was displayed Tuesday by a high Iranian presidential official as a stage prop in a propaganda broadside against the U.S.

Archbishop Hilarion Capucci, a Melchite Roman Catholic, had been recruited to sit at the table upon which President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's press secretary spilled the American remains from a cardboad box.

In other developments:

— Pentagon officials, responding to questions about the ill-fated attempt to rescue U.S. hostages in Iran, flatly deny the commando mission was halted because of a warning from the Soviet Union.

— Military equipment capable of supporting a 16,000-man Marine amphibious brigade reportedly is being assembled at Port Hueneme northwest of Los Angeles for shipment to an Indian Ocean staging area, but a Pentagon spokesman said the exercise was not specifically in response to the Iran crisis.

— The Iranian Army and Kurdish rebel groups continued to battle fiercely today, despite announcement of a ceasefire in Iran's northwestern province of Kurdistan.

Archbishop Capucci, an Arab known as the "Palestinian priest" following his imprisonment in Israel for smuggling arms to Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas and formerly Melchite archbishop of Jerusalem, had been called to Tehran to participate in the repatriation of the American bodies to the U.S.

Capucci sat quietly as Bani-Sadr's press secretary dumped a box of incinerated human remains on the linen cloth of the table in front of him.

Although the archbishop appeared slightly uncomfortable, he did not protest, and said:

"I appeal to all men to climb toward God."

He indicated that he would follow through with the repatriation of the bodies. But he made clear that the success of his mission still rested in the hands of Ayatollah Khomeini, who reportedly has given his blessing to their return.

In displaying the foot and another charred piece of flesh at the press conference, Bani-Sadr's press secretary, Musavi Garmaoudi, said that he was doing it "to show the crime of the Americans, because these (the remains) are human."

One American reporter present at the grisly quasi-political, quasi-religious press conference became openly ill and vomited in a corner of the room.

Schoolgirls defy Soviets

NEW DELHI (AP) — Hundreds of Afghan high school and college students shouting Death to the Soviets! and Russians Go Home! marched through Kabul on Tuesday in defiance of Soviet occupation troops, a report from the Afghan capital said.

The source said some schoolgirls who participated in the march were bloodied and there were reports some had been killed.

There was no independent confirmation. Western reporters were barred from the country earlier this year.

It was the biggest demonstration reported in Kabul since late February when at least 300 Afghan civilians were killed during anti-Soviet rioting.

Tuesday's march followed unconfirmed reports in Kabul that Soviet-backed government troops shot several schoolboys dead last Sunday and, the following day killed the woman principal of a girls' school.

An informant said Tuesday's disturbance started when about 200 students of a school near the Iranian Embassy began marching to the foreign ministry in the centre of Kabul to protest Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and the Soviet-backed government of Babrak Karmal.

The girls tossed rocks at passing vehicles after being surrounded by Afghan security forces, who were described as reluctant to use force. It was unclear what happened after that.

A second student group, apparently from the Aisha Durrani High School on the edge of Kabul's old city, marched through the same area and broke into chants of Russians Go Home when they sighted a group of Soviet or East European women shopping, the report continued.

The report did not say how the demonstrations ended.

Earlier reports from Kabul said campus feelings had been aroused by information that seven Afghan students were recently slain in the Soviet Union.

Fined for doing $2 an hour job

WINNIPEG (CP) — Eleven Polish citizens, who worked 10-hour shifts in a greenhouse for $2 an hour, were fined Monday for not having work permits.

"How could one break the law by working?" Stanislawa Bajno, 69, one of the accused, asked Judge John J. Enns through an interpreter.

The judge replied that he somestimes asked himself the same question but cautioned that the laws had to be obeyed.

Here on visitors permits, the Poles, employed at Addis Greenhouses, were fined $25 to $50 each for contravening the Immigration Act.

Later, the intrepreter, who asked that his name not be used, said the Canadian salary was a powerful lure to the Poles.

"The mighty dollar in Poland is very important," he said. "The dollar over there is a lot of money."

the prairies

Southern Alta. facing drought

EDMONTON (CP) — The dry fall, mild winter, and warm spring the province has experienced could spell doom for southeastern Alberta farmers.

Conrad Gietz, agriculture department agro-meteorologist, describes the water situation in the 60,000-square-kilometre dryland farming area as "very serious, even critical."

He said the warm weather means there's not enough moisture in the soil to produce an average crop even if there is normal rainfall.

"The immediate prospect for rain is not that good. It's a subject of mounting concern.

"If we have normal rains in that area there will be below normal crops. If the rainfall is below normal we'll have crop failure."

Geitz said it's the worst dry spell he's aware of in the last 10 years.

Breakaway union wins

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary brewery workers have beaten back a challenge to their recent secession from a national union.

The Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers has dropped a battle against its former members.

Carling O'Keefe workers voted 110-3 last December to break away from the union and set up their own Western Union of United Brewery, Beverage, Winery and Distillery Workers. Jordan Wines workers also joined.

Their main complaint against the Canadian Union was what they perceived as poor strike support and a drive toward national bargaining with all breweries.

The Canadian Union attacked the secession, saying the voting procedure violated the union's constitution.

The Canadian Union will remain the certified bargaining agent for the O'Keefe and Jordan workers, he said.

Power project too costly

EDMONTON (CP) — Civic administrators have dumped cold water on a scheme to turn garbage into energy.

Ald. Paul Norris asked administrators in February to check into the possibility of power plants that recover energy from solid wastes, similar to steam recovery plants in Montreal, Quebec City and Nashville, Tenn.

But a water and sanitation department report says revenue from the sale of recovered steam or electricity would only cover about half of the annual project cost.

The department said energy from waste projects is environmentally attractive but is expensive and could only be justified in Edmonton if the more economical current practice of landfilling is banned.

Swine abuse fined

EDMONTON (CP) — The driver of a livestock truck in which 17 hogs died was fined $15 in provincial court for causing unnecessary pain and suffering to an animal.

John Slipchuk, who was driving for Roberge Brothers Transport of Lloydminster, pleaded guilty to the charge before Judge R. E. Hyde.

Slipchuk delivered the hogs to an Edmonton packing plant Jan. 31 from North Battleford, Sask., without providing bedding for the 190 hogs in the trailer, court was told Tuesday.

There were 17 dead hogs on the trailer and many were frostbitten. Several had to be destroyed.

Rent increases crush elderly

She receives $332 a month in federal pension plus $45 from a provincial income supplement.

She has just got a notice that her rent will be going up from $280 to $335 a month July 1, when rent controls end in the province. She has $300 in the bank.

Mrs. Watson is one of an increasing number of seniors hit by rent increases that will probably drive them out of apartments in search of senior citizens' accommodation which have waiting lists of one to three years.

A spokesman for the Society for the Retired and Semi-Retired says most senior citizens in private accommodation face rent increases of $50 to $60 a month, although the society has heard of increases as high as $100 a month.

Paulette Mang, the society's housing co-ordinator, said it is hard to gauge how seniors are handling the increases. Many have started looking for other places but some don't want to move away from friends, to live on their own or cannot afford to move.

"Many of them must be receiving assistance from their families."

Mrs. Mang said accommodation is tight and there is not much the society can do to help beyond registering senior citizens seeking new accommodation and providing information and lists of housing.

"It's a desperate situation," Mrs. Mang said. "Many come to me seeing no way out but suicide, while others say maybe they'll have to sleep in the streets before someone does something."

'Yes' feared by Prairie French

By ALAN ARBUCKLE

GRAVELBOURG, Sask. (CP) — This community, sometimes called the French capital of Saskatchewan, is only beginning to wake up to the May 20 referendumm in Quebec now that polls suggest a yes vote could result.

Aside from French names on mail boxes, a few store signs and an imposing Roman Catholic cathedral, Gravelbourg, 150 kilometres southwest of Regina, looks much like any other Prairie town. But a yes vote in Quebec May 20 could doom it as an ethnic community.

Mayor Guy Dauphinais said there has been little talk in Gravelbourg about the referendum up to now. But interest is beginning to warm with the prospect of a strong yes vote.

While that would be only a mandate to negotiate, Dauphinais, a lawyer, agreed many English Canadians would see it as a vote for separatism. And without a large French population in Canada, Gravelbourg will find it hard to maintain its character.

About 70 per cent of the estimated 1,500 residents of the town consider French their mother tongue, he said.

Relations between French and English have always been good here. He said naturally some people will object anytime they hear a language they don't understand.

"Right now there isn't a place in town, that I'm aware of, that you can't go and get bilingual service," said the mayor.

But a local lawyer is currently trying to get an impaired driving case heard in French. The provincial court system is not geared to holding trails in that language.

Real Forest, director of College Mathieu, a resident French high school here, said the community now has a piece of a larger pie.

"We are part of a substantial minority," said Forest. "If Quebec ever separates, we would become a very insignificant minority."

A yes vote to people already strugggling to convince others they have special language rights "would be the beginning of the end."

A good deal of French is spoken in Gravelbourg, especially among older people who feel more comfortable in that language, said Forest. "Still a lot of French is spoken in the stores and local businesses, but I would not necessarily say it's a majority of the time."

As well as the 120 students taking courses in French at College Mathieu, the town has an elementary school that offers classes in both French and English. In all, Saskatchewan has 23 schools designated to offer classes in both languages.

To keep the gains French people in Saskatchewan have made, aggressive organizations are needed, said Forest. But he and Dauphinais agreed the provincial French cultural association made a mistake in calling for a yes vote in the referendum as a means of promoting constitutional change.

A group of Forest's students were split in what they hoped to see come out of the referendum. While some wanted a yes vote to lead to a revamped confederation, others feared it would lead to Quebec separating and their community lost in the shuffle. But there was general agreement other Canadians need to be more aware how much language means to those who speak French.

Pierre Lolos, a Montrealler of Greek extraction running a restaurant in Gravelbourg, said his customers did not appear overly worried about the referendum.

Certainly he wasn't: "It makes no difference to me. I'm settled here already. I have nothing to do with Quebec right now."

He said he came West this year in search of a business opportunity and found it.

He's boosting birds as mosquito killers

WINNIPEG (CP) — If Duane Johnson had his way, everyone here would have a birdhouse in the backyard. If everybody did, he said, Winnipeg would be mosquito-free in two years.

Johnson heads a group that believes the solution to the city's mosquito problem is to coax purple martins to settle here.

"One bird eats 2,000 mosquitoes a day," he said. "The more birds the less mosquitoes."

Johnson said his Manitoba purple martin bird club is selling birdhouses at cost, and wants the city to consider putting them in parks and golf courses.

The purple martin, about 7½ inches long, is the largest of the swallow species that regularly inhabit Manitoba. Unlike barn swallows, they don't build nests — hence the necessity to put up birdhouses.

They go in for communal living, in apartment-type birdhouses high off the ground. The structures don't usually attract other birds.

Johnson said the bird is a hero in some United States cities where it has eliminated the mosquito problem.

"It's natural and it's better than spraying."

However, it's going to take more than a few birdhouses scattered around Winnipeg to chase the blood-thirsty insects away.

"If you put one nouse up in your yard you may not notice a difference," Johnson said. "But if your neighbors all put up houses you will notice a difference."

The birds eat only flying insects, he said, so gardeners wouldn't have to worry about the birds feasting on their garden seeds.

Johnson said the purple martins would not create any other problems while making life easier for the outdoor barbeque crowd.

Reaction to Johnson's idea has been favorable.

Among those interested in Deputy Mayor Pearl McGonical, who would probably be immortalized if she could come up with a way to rid the city of mosquitoes.

Course for hunters

REGINA (CP) — Hunters under the age of 18 seeking licences in the 1981 hunting season will have to take a one-day firearm safety course, said Reg Gross, minister of tourism and renewable resources.

Gross said the course, already offered by the Saskatchewan Wildlife Federation, will be made mandatory for the hunting season next year. The year's lapse will give the government time to ensure enough instructors are available and the course is fully developed in all areas of Saskatchewan.

Gross said 61 per cent of all firearm accidents in the province involve persons under 18.

Two-way TV makes debut

HEADINGLEY, Man. (CP) — Project Ida, Manitoba's first step into the brave new world of two-way television, is underway.

Twenty-one homes here, just west of Winnipeg, were hooked up to the system this week.

When fully operational, it will provide smoke and burglar alarms, read meters automatically and permit people to shop and bank from their homes.

Those on the system, named after Ida Cates, Manitoba's first telephone operator, will also be able to tune into an extensive information bank which will list everything from restaurant menus to constantly updated news, weather and sports.

All this and more will be carried on 35 channels, project manager Dennis McCaffrey said Monday. And if everything goes well in Headingly, all of Winnipeg could be "turned up" or plugged into the system within five years.

At present, Project Ida provides the 21 Headingly households with regular cable television service and two educational channels.

One is produced by the Ontario Educational Communications Authority and relayed by satellite. The other originates at Winnipeg's Sturgeon Creek Regional Secondary School.

Eleanor Friessen, one of the residents whose homes are included in the experiment, said she finds the prospects of the system fascinating.

"I'd love to sit here and do all my shopping and look at all the ads," she said. "I love to shop, but with two small children, I don't have the time anymore."

"It'll be good for the kids," she added. "It'll probably help them with their schoolwork when they're older."

Nearby Pheonix elementary school is to be connected to the system within two weeks. Principal Merrill Groff said teachers are excited about the service and hope to be able to write and produce some programs themselves.

Mrs. Friessen, a former teacher, said she is curious to find out what educational opportunities the system holds for her. If the University of Manitoba follows through with its plan to develop continuing education programs, she would like to finish her Arts degree.

Manitoba Telephone System is spending $1.6 million on the system. Twenty other companies are offering a variety of computer services.

NDP: no place to live 1,000 to miss UVic

About 1,000 out-of-town students will have to change their minds about attending the University of Victoria next fall because they won't have any place to stay, Victoria NDP MLA Gordon Hanson said Tuesday.

"The university will be short approximately 1,000 student residences and with a zero vacancy rate for rental accommodation, students from out of the city will not be able to attend."

It boils down to discrimination against students from the rural areas of the province who want a university education, he said.

UVic gets more rural students proportionately than either the University of B.C. or Simon Fraser, Hanson said.

"The other two institutions have adequate accommodation. UVic is getting the short end of the stick."

The remedy, he said, is simple. There must be an immediate start on construction of new student residences with particular emphasis on family quarters, which don't exist at UVic.

He also called for a return to the financial assistance formula for needy students which was available under the NDP.

That program provided a $1,000 grant plus loans of up to $800. The Socred government reversed the formula, providing a grant of $800 plus loans of up to $1,000, depending on need.

Nursing homes checked

The Victoria fire department has completed its check of the 43 privately-owned nursing homes in the city, Fire Chief Eric Simmons said Tuesday.

Department staff started their inspections in mid-March and are now visiting each owner individually and pointing out upgrading work that needs to be done.

Simmons said they are issuing a fire chief's order at each home which specifies what fire safety improvements have to be carried out within 90 days.

Owners also have the right to appeal to city council's fire prevention committee for special consideration. Simmons said he understood one owner had already done so.

Simmons said it would take some time to work through the list of nursing homes, as the department is handling one to two a week.

Cowichan to get new zone laws

North Cowichan may soon have its new zoning bylaw.

Following public information meetings scheduled for Chemainus, Crofton, Maple Bay and the south end, a two-day, public hearing on the new zoning regulations will be held June 16-17.

Council hopes to give third and then final reading to the bylaw in late June.

In other business, council turned its attention to complaints about private landing strips in the municipality.

It decided that in future all private landing strips, helicopter pads and aerodromes must be approved by the council.

At the meeting, aldermen were also told that vandalized signs in the municipality cost taxpayers $48,000 last year.

Three injured

Dane Skillings, 23, the driver of the car, and passenger Leah Graham, 16, are in fairly good condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

All gave their address as 1620 Belmont.

The driver of the truck, David Laurie Josephson, of 3343 Luxton in Colwood, received only minor cuts and bruises in the mishap which occurred at 1:45 p.m. about five kilometres west of Sooke on the West Coast Road.

Skillings and Graham were trapped in the wreckage and were freed by Sooke firemen and the emergency response team using the Jaws of Life.

While rushing to the scene to investigate, Sgt. Gerry Miller of the Sooke detachment was involved in a collision with another car at Otter Point Road and Quartz Drive causing about $500 damage to the patrol car.

There were no injuries.

Municipal grants

Municipalities and regional districts in B.C. will share $25.2 million this year under the federal government's Community Services Contribution Program.

The federal minister responsible for Canada Mortgage and Housing, Paul Cosgrove, and Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm say almost all the funds will go toward water and sewer works.

The funds are given as a 20-per-cent grant of total capital costs.

Water meter move to aid irrigation

Central Saanich farmers will have more water at their disposal for irrigation purposes if a recommendation from council's water committee is approved.

The committee Monday proposed installing 19 one-inch water meters and two two-inch meters to enlarge the scope of irrigation in the municipality.

The cost of the change-over will average about $500 per unit and will be borne by farmers.

Color bursts from annuals

hilda beastall

Flowering annuals so often known as bedding plants, are as gay as summer should be, because their short lives are concentrated on producing a great number of flowers before they wither and die in fall.

This is why petunias, snapdragons, nemesias, schizanthuses and the whole range of marigolds are popular. Each year thousands of these and other annuals are sold to give almost instant color in gardens.

A new garden, or one just taken over by a new owner or tenant, can literally burst into bloom within two to three weeks after the plants are put in. It just depends on the kinds chosen.

Preparation of the allotted space must be done before planting. In a rough way, the toughest, largest weed roots are removed and stacked as a beginning of a compost heap. It is never too soon to start the heap, it can only grow to usable size if it has a beginning.

Some of the lesser grass roots can be turned upside down at a depth of a foot or so, while the topsoil is broken down on top for the annuals to grow in.

Don't remove every small stone from the topsoil; they tend to retain warmth in the soil and also permit aeration of the soil, both requirements for quick root action particularly in clay loam. Ideally the bed should be allowed to settle for a few days before planting, being watered lightly before setting.

Don't add fertilizer at time of planting or more leaves than flowers will result. Time enough by about July 1, when the annuals are in full bloom, to give a small amount well watered in so that the nutrients will be available to the roots during the warmest weather.

As noted in previous columns on planting, each little plant should be carefully set into the soil at same depth as in the nursery container.

Firm the soil around the roots with the fingers. When finished with one small section of your planting, water each plant with a gentle open nozzle at low pressure so that the roots will not soon dry out.

Nemesias like sunshine, too, but will also give a good effect if dappled tree shade reaches them for part of the afternoon. They are low growing, so don't hide them behind taller growing plants. Their colors blend with almost any other annual plants.

Schizanthuses like a spot sheltered from strong wind, and so best if shade reaches them for a considerable part of each day. In the garden, they are plants for places where they are enjoyed at close range — in planters on shady patios or sundecks, or balconies.

The flowers of schizanthus are supposed to resemble tiny orchids, but they are indeed delicately beautiful, finely marked and delightfully colored in pink, crimson, mauve and purple, each color with tinges of buff.

Stocks and other scented flowering annuals need a sunny place to develop their fragrances; they will then be ready to give them off to the cooler evening air. Plant them either near house doors or windows, or near where you might be hoping to relax later in summer.

By getting all this planting activity well started in our long spring days, there is hope that summer evenings will bring the leisure to enjoy the results.

Bedding annuals will make a new house and garden into a home while the slower growing trees and shrubs are getting established, so don't delay getting in these colorful summer residents.

Atlantic battle 35 years ago remembered

CFB Esquimalt will mark the 35th anniversary of the Battle of the Atlantic on Sunday with a memorial service at the upper playing field on Colville Road.

Chaplain Major W.L. Howie will conduct the service, which begins at 11 a.m. Participants are asked to be seated by 10:45 a.m.

The Esquimalt ceremony will be one of many to be held by naval units across Canada. The national ceremony will be held at the Sailor's Memorial in Halifax.

Sunday also marks the 70th anniversary of the formation of the Royal Canadian Navy, officially established May 4, 1910.

Scotland Yard's secret weapon: supergrass

LONDON (AP) — After two years of pulling off holdups totalling $4.6 million, a criminal nicknamed The General figured he had it made.

His planning was meticulous. His five-man gang was tight and ruthless. Scotland Yard hadn't come close to nailing them.

But as The General, also known as ex-housepainter Charles Knight, planned his most ambitious caper — a commando-style raid on the ship Queen Elizabeth to steal $8 million in foreign currency — he became a victim of the Yard's secret weapon — the supergrass.

Detectives nabbed him after a high-speed chase through London's East End and rolled up his gang. It was the latest in a long string of Yard successes against the British capital's increasingly organized and violent gangs, or firms, as they are called.

The mobsters were all betrayed by supergrasses, big-time hoods wanted for major crimes who spill the beans on their erstwhile partners in return for lenient sentences.

Thirty of them have in the last few years informed on more than 200 gangsters for 1,000 crimes, including murder, dating back two decades. Police estimate the loot from these crimes at more than $69 million.

Despite these triumphs, the use of informers on this scale has resulted in growing unease in legal circles, partly because it violates the cherished tradition of fair play.

The most sensational informer is George Bradshaw, a killer who confessed to 420 crimes and named 105 major underworld figures.

One detective said Bradhaw's testimony was "probably the single biggest break we've had in the war against organized crime in Britain."

The first supergrass was bank robber Bertie Smalls, arrested in December, 1972, at a time when the Yard was on the ropes from an alarming surge in bank and payroll holdups. Smalls was charged with several crimes. But he "did the Royals," underworld jargon for turning Crown's evidence, in return for immunity from proseuction.

His testimony put 27 of the most violent bank robberts in London behind bars for a total of 315 years. He was the only one to get total immunity. But he set the pattern.

The informers have become marked men. Several have been the targets of assassination attempts. David Smith, a gunman and killer whose confessions jailed 90 of his cronies, has been saved twice from hit men by detectives.

Another, John Wesson, was given plastic surgery to change his appearance after he survived a shooting. He was also given a new identity and a job outside London.

Most supergrass do their reduced sentences in one of the six maximum security police stations around London. They are guarded in luxury cells with color TV, liquor and "conjugal visits" from wives and lovers.

Immunity from prosecution and plea-bargaining for short sentences are common in the United States, but they're generally frowned on in Britain.

The Home Office says it approves lenient sentences for supergrasses, even if they are guilty of major crimes, "to encourage others to give similar assistance."

But judges are increasingly apprehensive about letting self-confessed criminals off the hook and juries have become skeptical of supergrass evidence.

Microwaves warm you — not the turkey

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Using no more power than a lightbulb, small doses of microwaves can warm people just as effectively as microwave ovens roast turkeys, says a Harvard University physicist.

Professor Robert Pound says that home microwaves can produce radiant heat that should be able to supplement furnaces to keep people warm.

The innovation, he said, "could contribute importantly toward alleviating the developing world energy crisis."

Pound, who outlined his idea in the journal Science, says this kind of radiation is no more dangerous than the heat waves from a fireplace or wood stove.

When a microwave generator is installed in a room, he says, the waves will heat the people, not the air. So even when the air temperature is low, people will feel warm.

The only drawback, Pound said, would be that walls, ceilings and floors would have to be covered with metal foil in order for the microwave heating to be efficient. The foil, which could have decorative facing, would reflect the microwaves and bounce them around the room.

Furniture would also have to be designed so that it wouldn't absorb and thereby waste the microwaves.

Pound said that in a room where the air is 10 degrees Celsius, 60 watts worth of microwaves would make a person feel as though the temperature is 22. Two people would require twice as many microwaves.

Not everyone in the room may like the same temperature. So those who want to be cooler could wear clothing with metallized threads that screen out some of the microwaves.

Russian scientists have found that workers exposed to microwave radiation for many years suffer abnormally slow heart beats, chest pains, insomnia, headaches, irritability and memory loss. However, U.S. researchers have not duplicated the findings.

Pound said the heating radiation is safe because the microwaves would be very short — only one centimetre long. The waves in a microwave oven are 12 centimetres. These very short waves would penetrate only the skin, and Pound said they fall within federal safety limits.

"It seems likely that there is little difference between being warmed by such microwaves and being warmed by more conventional infrared waves," he wrote. "No great danger has been cited from the radiation from a fire on the grate or a stove."

Bond dealers arrested

FRANKFURT, West Germany (Reuter) — Six bond dealers from four major West German banks have been arrested in a fraud case involving more than $40 million, a Frankfurt prosecutor said. The fraud involved fixed-interest securities illegally sold at the expense of credit institutes and banks, the prosecutor said.

Opening lead — jack of spades.

Let's assume you're declarer at four hearts and West leads the jack of spades. There seems to be nothing to the play, but when you win the spade in dummy with the queen and lead a trump to your queen, East shows out and you learn that the ten "sure" tricks you started with are not nearly as certain as you thought they were.

Let's say you next cash the A-K of spades, discarding a diamond from dummy, and then, with fingers crossed, play the A-K-Q of clubs, hoping West will follow suit. But West ruffs the third round of clubs, shifts to a diamond, and you go down one.

You might think you were very unlucky to run into a 5-0 trump division, and you might even wonder why these things always seem to happen to you. But if you think about it some more, you realize that you could have — and should have — made the contract.

Instead of discarding a diamond from dummy when you played the A-K of spades, you should have discarded the queen of clubs! You could then cash dummy's A-K of clubs, getting by this hurdle safely, lead a low trump to your ten and then play the ten of clubs, ruffing high in dummy, if necessary. This sequence of plays would have brought home your tenth trick.

Actually, there's nothing fancy about this method of play — it just looks fancy. It cannot cost you a trick to discard the queen of clubs, and at the same time it greatly increases your chance to make the contract. The fact is that if the queen of clubs in dummy had been the deuce of clubs, you surely would have followed this course of play, discarding the club deuce on your king of spades, and would easily have made the contract.

"I'll just have these," said Susan, putting down her purchases on the counter. "What are the prices?"

Bob checked. $1.50 and 40 cents," he replied. "I'll make up and invoice."

Susan watched with amazement as he did so. "That's crazy," she told him. "You multiplied the two amounts instead of adding them."

"But the total was okay," the clerk replied. And it was!

The Saint That Roared: some strange fallout

By WAYNE KING
New York Times

COUGAR, Wash. — Sandy Mortensen, a large, handsome woman cloaked in a dazzling bandana apron, bustled behind the counter at the Wildwood Inn, a bar and grill in the middle of Cougar. "I knew the mountain was going to erupt," she said with the hint of a smile.

The men at the bar, mostly timber men, looked at her without expression.

"How did you know that?" asked a visitor, taking the bait along with the steaming clam chowder he spooned at the bar.

"Well," Mrs. Mortensen said deadpan, "Grandaddy had on a necktie, and I saw about 40 Bigfoots running through the woods. They all had their suitcases packed."

Before Mount St. Helens woke up, the little mountain enclave of Cougar was largely a timber town, with a general store, post office, service station and two or three roadhouses where a thirsty man could down a cold beer or two after hauling logs all day.

Jim was a damn good riggin' man.
Our job is to get the logs out.
That God is a logger I do not doubt.
If we do our job it will please Him,
And He will smile when He sees Jim.
When I am gone I hope some loggers will say,
"We buried a good riggin' man today."

The log-hauling trucks, big Macks, Peterbilts and Kenworths, still hurtle precariously down the snaking two-lane blacktop from Mount St. Helens, but the fallout from the only active volcano in the lower 48 states has not been entirely volcanic ash.

"The only thing it's done for this part of the country," said a shaggy, ample logger at the bar, "is to turn it into a tourist attraction and everybody quit workin' for two weeks."

"Course," he reflected, "that ain't too bad."

"Oh, I guess we've turned away a couple hundred today," said Steve Kimball, the young, red-haired Forest Service spokesman at the barricade a few miles up the road from Cougar and about eight miles from the volcano. "Mostly from Seattle, Portland, but California, Ohio, the East Coast, everywhere. The local people don't care, but everybody else wants to see the volcano. It's pretty quiet today, but you can hear it, like yesterday, when it blew some smoke and ash. People really want to see that."

For one weekend, the roadblock was set up on the other side of Cougar, cutting it off from tourist traffic, a situation that spawned a general uprising in town and forced a move.

The Wildwood's waitress, Sue Parker, now sports a T-shirt with "St. Helen's Blows Its Cool" on the front and "Wildwood Inn" on the back. The shirts sell for $9 apiece, and business is brisk. "It's picked up quite a bit," said Gene Mortensen. "We get 'em from Cincinnati, Illinois, Florida, and the TV has come from all over the world."

Across the street at the Cougar General Store, amid the Louis L'Amour Western novels, beer and summer sausage, travelers can buy photographs of the mountain or spend $3.95 for the poster that depicts "The Saint That Roared."

There are T-shirts in 10 colors, reading "Where Were You When St. Helens Blew," for $6.50 to $7.80; "volcano mice," little chunks of pumice with eyes attached, that sell for a few dollars, and a bumper sticker that boasts, "I survived St. Helens," for $1.95.

"We really sell a lot of them," said Dot Elmire, the proprietor. "We're getting quite a little bit of business."

The store is sold out of one hot item, volcanic ash. "This fellow lives up on the hill," explained Mrs. Elmire, "he had taken maybe a teaspoon and wrapped it with Saran Wrap. He sold it for $2. Anybody who can sneak up there can get it and sell it. People will buy anything."

Back across the blacktop at the A&R Grocery, where a rusty shovel is propped up in front with a sign, "Emergency Lava Shovel," another bumper sticker is on sale ("I'm a Volcano Viewer"), along with a collection of souvenir buttons ("Blow Your Mind," "Caution, Mt. St. Helens at Work," "Eruption, 1980," etc.) for $1.50, along with yet another set of T-shirts with legends such as "Follow the Ash in Front of You to St. Helens," not to mention boxes of a candy called Volcano Rocks for a quarter.

Using sizzle to sell 'hot ice'

By MARTIN BARON
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Will the story never end?

Only last autumn, it seemed that the final chapter had been written in the twisted tale of diamonds, stolen funds, a wily computer analyst and his victim, Security Pacific National Bank.

But this story comes with an epilogue. And its' being written by May Co. Department Stores and a New York agent who handles jewelry operations for the St. Louis-based department store chain. If events unfold as planned, the case truly will be an embarrassment of riches — the banks embarrassment becomes the jeweler's riches.

Come Mother's Day on May 11, newspaper advertisements throughout Southern California will proclaim, "Hot Ice Returns to Los Angeles." The "hot ice" is a portion of the diamonds bought by computer analyst Stanley Mark Rifkin with part of the $10.2 million he stole from Security Pacific via wire theft in the fall of 1978, executing what is believed to be the biggest bank theft in history.

The final chapter in all this seemed to have been written last September when, after Rifkin was caught, the bank sold the diamonds to recover some of the stolen money. An Israeli diamond firm, Goldfinger & Sons, bought the diamonds through G.S.G. Investment A.G., one of its corporate entities registered in Liechtenstein. The purchase price was $6.5 million, well below the $8.1 million Rifkin had paid for them and the $7.75 million appraised value.

But the story did not end there. From the beginning, May Co.'s New York agent had an arrangement with the Israeli firm to buy a portion of the diamonds. After all, here was a dandy story of intrigue, a story that could sell diamonds.

And now the agent's collection of stones, set into 3,000 pieces of jewelry with an estimated retail value of $5 million, will go on sale May 11 at May Co.'s 28 stores in Southern California.

Putting on this sale is Stephen Singer, president of New York's Finlay Fine Jewelry Co., which leases and operates the jewelry concession in May Co. stores. Singer's firm, not the department store chain, bought the diamonds. The May Co., however, receives a percentage of gross sales.

"I knew right away that the setting and sale of these diamonds could be the jewelry event of the decade," Singer is quoted as saying in a promotional press release.

Or, as Singer put it in a telephone interview: "What's the line — 'it's not the steak, it's the sizzle'? Sure, there's some sizzle here."

Muskie has soft spot for Canada?

★ Bert Lance acquitted on 9 counts

ATLANTA (AP) — Former U.S. budget director Bert Lance was acquitted today on nine counts of bank fraud after a 16-week trial. A mistrial was declared on three other counts because the jury was deadlocked.

Lance's lawyers asked U.S. District Judge Charles Moye to declare directed verdicts of acquittal on the three remaining counts. Moye said he was not ready to decide immediately, but called lawyers for both sides into his chambers.

Lance was found not guilty on nine charges of misusing the funds of two Georgia banks he headed to make loans to his wife, his son and three friends.

The jurors could not reach a decision on two counts charging Lance lied in financial statements and one count charging that a loan Lance made to co-accused Carr through the National Bank of Georgia was a misapplication of bank funds.

Carter, Muskie, left, shake on deal

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The choice of Edmund Muskie for the key job of U.S. Secretary of State is a positive sign for Canadian hopes of getting a stalled Canada-U.S. fisheries treaty approved by the U.S. Senate, Canadian officials here feel.

Muskie, nominated Tuesday by President Carter to take over from Cyrus Vance who resigned because of his opposition to the use of military force in Iran to try to free the U.S. hostages, has supported the treaty to divide up fishing rights that was signed a year ago but never approved by the Senate.

Muskie's political base in Maine, bordering Quebec and home for about 140,000 French-speaking residents, gives the senator a natural interest in Canadian affairs.

For example, Muskie invited Quebec Premier Rene Levesque to his office for a friendly chat after Levesque's address to the National Press Club here in January, 1979, where the premier proclaimed Quebecers' "god-given right" to opt out of Canada if a majority wanted to do so.

Muskie said later he had "a little different perspective" about Quebec after meeting Levesque, and ventured that Quebec separation likely posed less threat to Canadian prosperity than newspaper stories suggested. Levesque was "charming, eloquent and likeable", Muskie said.

Muskie, 66, was a suprise choice, but he is expected to run into little difficulty getting Senate confirmation. A 22-year Senate veteran, Muskie is considered a voice of reason, a man of "courage, ability and keen foresight" in the words of Senate majority leader Robert Byrd (Dem.-W. Va.).

Muskie came to national attention in 1968 as Hubert Humphrey's vice-presidential candidate in a losing Democratic battle to win the White Houe that November. Muskie than made an unsuccessful bid to win the Democratic presidential nomination in 1972, a year when the Canadian connection was an unhappy one for him.

A New Hampshire newspaper, the Manchester Union-Leader, printed a series of critical stories alleging Muskie smeared Americans of French-Canadian origin by calling them "Canucks", and ultimately the Muskie campaign collapsed in a tearful speech denouncing the newspaper attacks on he and his wife.

Although Muskie's new post takes him above a direct role in environmental issues, he opposes current Carter administration proposals for increased use of coal, rather than oil, because Muskie fears increased acid-rain problems.

Eastern Canadians will also note that Muskie's new job removes a powerful voice from the U.S. Senate in favor of a $750-million Dickey-Lincoln hydro project to put dams on the St. John River.

External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan said in an interview Tuesday Muskie is a close neighbor and friend of Canada.

But Pauline Jewett, foreign affairs spokesman for the New Democratic Party, suggested the nomination was "totally political," designed to shore up Carter's position.

"I doubt that he will have the kind of toughness that is needed in foreign policy making," Reagan said.

U.S. expands 2,4-D testing; Dow unruffled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief manufacturer of 2,4-D, the most widely used herbicide in the United States, says it doesn't expect to have any trouble proving the weed killer isn't dangerous to human health.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) gave notice Tuesday that it was ordering more health studies, saying significant gaps exist in the current information on the herbicide, which is used in 1,500 different products.

EPA said that unless the manufacturers agree to the studies in 90 days, the agency will order all sales halted.

But Dow Chemical Co., the largest manufacturer, said that as long as the agency made reasonable requests for new studies, it planned to go along.

"We don't think there is any hazard in using 2,4-D as registered or we wouldn't be selling it," said John Donalds, chief of Dow's agricultural products.

EPA last year issued an emergency ban on most uses of 2,4,5-T and Silvex, two herbicides closely related to 2,4-D. The emergency ban, which EPA wants to make permanent, came after women in Oregon complained of miscarriages when the herbicides were sprayed near their homes.

Both 2,4,5-T and 2,4-D were components of Agent Orange, the controversial defoliant hundreds of Vietnam veterans are blaming for a multitude of health problems.

But 2,4-D does not contain dioxin, the deadly contaminant found to cause cancer and birth defects in laboratory animals.

Iran's U.K. embassy seized

Rebel patriots take 21 hostage

LONDON (AP) — Three Iranian Arab gunmen invaded Iran's London embassy today and seized 21 hostages, including a British police guard, Scotland Yard said.

Unconfirmed reports said the raiders threatened to kill their captives and blow up the building unless political prisoners in Iran are released.

The top Iranian diplomat in London, Charge d'Affaires Gholam-Ali Afrouz, was believed to be among the hostages, said the British news agency Press Association.

One hostage, a woman who police said was suffering from severe shock, was released five hours after the takeover and was carried out on a stretcher.

Police said the gunmen identified themselves as Arabs from Iran's southwestern province of Khuzestan — which they call Arabistan — who support Arab autonomy from the Persian-dominated revolutionary government of Iran. Iran accuses Arab Iraq of fomenting unrest in the region.

"Another agitation of Iraq," was an Iranian foreign ministry spokesman's comment when informed of the embassy incident.

Police said the gunmen were upset by an early radio report that they might be Iraqis.

For months Khuzestan has been troubled by bombings and attacks on Iranian government officials and security officers by Arab militants. Dissidents among the some 750,000 Iranian Arabs have been demanding greater Arab control over education and other aspects of local life in Khuzestan. Some want to secede from Iran.

Some witnesses reported having heard shooting inside the building, but police disputed this and said that as far as they knew no one was hurt.

The embassy has a staff of about 25 diplomats, as well as a number of non-diplomatic personnel. Witnesses said they saw a small number of men and women fleeing the building, in the prosperous, embassy-filled Kensington district opposite Hyde Park, shortly before police arrived at about 11:30 a.m. London time.

Negotiations with the intruders took place by telephone and through an open window at the front of the embassy, a police spokesman said. With policemen at the window was a young, dark-haired woman in a floral-print dress and police-issue, blue flak-jacket who appeared to be acting as an interpreter.

A police spokesman at the scene said the gunmen were "making certain demands which are being investigated," but refused to elaborate.

Scotland Yard refused to comment on reports the invaders were threatening to kill their captives and blow up the embassy if political prisoners were not freed in Iran. But police said the gunmen had set no deadline.

Some time after police began talking with the gunmen, three women, one with a baby in a stroller, were brought to the embassy doorway and taken into the building. At least two were Middle Eastern in appearance. There was was no explanation for their arrival.

Deputy Assistant Police Commissioner John Dellow said the three men, armed with rifles and possibly other weapons, entered the embassy through a back door and proceeded to the front of the building, where they grabbed the police guard, a member of London's Diplomatic Protection Group.

Angela Gardener, receptionist at the Royal College of Practitioners next door, said she thought there was a man hiding in the garden.

"A window cleaner burst in here and said that he had heard two or three shots fired from inside the embassy," she said.

"Almost immediately the police were here. They were armed and wearing bullet-proof vests. I could see three policemen in the garden at the back of the embassy. I thought the man could be hiding out there."

Beggars, drunks 'turning Victoria into Skid Road'

By AL FORREST

Four Victoria organizations are asking city council and the police to get tough with panhandlers and drunks in the downtown area.

"They're turning the city of gardens into Skid Road," said Victoria Restaurant Association president George Acs.

"It's a disgrace."

Also concerned are the Visitors Information Centre (VIC), the Victoria Downtown Business Association and the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Their complaints:

— The city has been hit with more beggars than usual and earlier in the year.

— They walk into the Causeway tourist bureau and ask tourists for money to get to Vancouver.

— Drunks wander into the bureau at night and harass the female staff members.

— They gather in a zone from Bastion Square to the Causeway, shouting obscenities, asking for money and occasionally urinating in public.

"It's no fun to be accosted by these people and it is especially troublesome when you are on the town for an evening," Acs said.

"They come right up to you and ask for money. Some of them get quite belligerent if you refuse. There's no use phoning the police. They can't do anything."

Federal laws permit police to take action if someone is drunk and disorderly in a public place but sections allowing police to act against loitering have been removed.

Victoria police say there is little they can do about begging under present laws unless the panhandler physically obstructs a citizen.

He said council should bring in a tough bylaw giving police power to deal effectively with the problem.

"Begging isn't necessary any more. There are social services available to handle this kind of problem. The panhandlers are giving Victoria a bad appearance."

The VIC is also writing a letter of protest, especially in view of a number of verbal assaults on female staff members.

Canadian playmate of the year

Dorothy Stratten of Vancouver was named 1980 Playmate of the Year, the first Canadian to win the title since it was established 21 years ago by Hugh Hefner's magazine for men.

Clad in a strapless gold wraparound dress, the shapely blonde 20-year-old claimed a $25,000 cheque Tuesday and almost $175,000 worth of prizes amid much popping of flashbulbs at a gala Playboy Mansion chicken crepes-and-seafood luncheon.

"I'll always be a Canadian at heart, and I'm very, very proud to be the first Canadian Playmate of the Year," she said.

Eagleson cancels '80 Canada Cup

Canadian Press

The 1980 Canada Cup hockey tournament has been cancelled, Toronto lawyer Alan Eagleson announced today.

The announcement at a noon news conference followed growing opposition by the public and National Hockey League players and executives to the planned September tournament which was to have included a Soviet Union team.

Numerous athletes and officials had condemned the planned Soviet participation while Canada and the United States are boycotting the Moscow Olympics in protest against the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Eagleson, chief international negotiator for Hockey Canada and executive director of the NHL Players' Association, told the news conference:

"During the last 24 hours I have been in contact with several NHL player representatives and the majority have agreed that they don't feel they can support the 1980 Canada Cup concept with Soviet participation.

"Many of the players realize that 1980 might be the last opportunity they have to represent their country in the tournament because of their age. But the players unanimously agreed that because of the sacrifice the Olympic athletes have made to not go to Moscow that we had no alternative but to cancel the Cup."

Although the cancellation was made by Hockey Canada and confirmed by Hockey Canada chairman Lou Lefaive, it appeared it was the opposition voiced by NHL players that forced the decision after the federal government earlier said it would not ban participation by the Soviet hockey team. Many top NHL players had said they would not want to play if the Soviet team was involved.

"If they are invited and if I'm asked to play, I'd turn down the invitation," said Bobby Clarke of the Philadelphia Flyers, captain of the victorious Canadian squad in the 1976 Canada Cup. "No way I would play."

Montreal Canadiens defenceman Larry Robinson said the amateur athletes who are being denied a trip to Moscow should not be the only ones to suffer.

Index drop worst since Depression

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. index of economic indicators declined in March by the third-largest amount since the Depression, the commerce department said today, providing more evidence that the country might face a severe recession.

The index fell 2.6 per cent last month — the eighth decline in the last 12 months and the steepest since September, 1974, when the index fell three per cent as the economy was sinking into the 1974-1975 recession.

"It means forces are very much tilted toward recession," said Feliks Tamm, a commerce department analyst.

Riot mars Dutch coronation

By JANE O'HARA
FP News Service

AMSTERDAM — Troops of Dutch riot police — some wearing steel helmets and carrying rifles, others mounted on horseback — surrounded Amsterdam's historic Dam Square to prevent thousands of rioting youths from storming the ceremonial inauguration of Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands. It was a coronation under siege.

Violent clashes between Amsterdam's squatters and shield-carrying riot police first broke out at 11 a.m. today when a group of squatters tried to take over an empty building two kilometres from Amsterdam's royal palace and New Church, the site of Beatrix's coronation ceremonies.

While riots continued at a distance, Beatrix was greeted on the balcony of the palace by boos and cheers, a mixture of smoke bombs and ticker tapes.

The initial riots were quelled when police using clubs and police in vans drove through and at the rebels. The squatters retaliated by throwing stones, smoke bombs and beer cans at their adversaries.

As the day wore on, and the inauguration ceremonies moved to the New Church, the gangs rapidly moved closer to the Dam Square.

Police were hampered by an estimated one million people who added to the crush because of Tuesday's public holiday.

By 3 p.m. the riots had reached the outskirts of the square. More police were moved in, and policemen formed human barricades down many side streets leading to the square.

As Mozartian strains sounded in New Church, police were showered with missiles. The riots, however, did not disrupt the sombre religious service which was attended by 57 heads of state, including Britain's Prince Charles, Canada's Governor-General Ed Schreyer and his wife Lily, and many of the crowned heads of Europe.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, in which Beatrix was sworn-in, succeeding Queen Juliana whose 32-year reign ended his morning when she signed her formal abdication, the distinguished international guests paraded from the New Church to the Royal Palace. As they did so, they were booed and jeered by an estimated 50,000 people who crushed into the square.

The squatters, known as Krakers, are left-wing extremists who for the past three months have been violently protesting Amsterdam's housing shortage.

In March Dutch troops and policemen bulldozed a squatter settlement which had been erected in several Amsterdam streets.

The outbreak of violence came as no surprise to the authorities. They had been expecting trouble from the Krakers as well as from Republican sympathizers, and South Moluccan terrorists.

Police get word on fuzz

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Neat and tidy moustaches and sideburns are officially okay for Victoria police but beards are out, according to grooming standards adopted today by the city police board.

"Hair is to be neatly groomed and styled, but not to extend below the middle of the collar when member is in a standing position, and without excessive outward flair," is the requirement for male members of the force.

Policewomen likewise must have neat hairstyles, but their hair may not extend below the tip of the clavicle when they are standing.

Policemen's hair may also not extend below the middle of the ear and sideburns are to be squared off and no longer than the bottom of the earlobe.

"Styling of hair and sideburns is to be compatible with the uniform?" asked police board member Alf Hood, reading one section of the guidelines.

"Well, it's a value judgment," said Chief William Snowdon.

Regarding facial hair, the standards say: "Sworn members shall be clean and neat in person and clean shaven, with the exception that moustaches may be worn."

They may not extend more than half an inch below the corner of the mouth and no higher than the bottom of the nostril.

"The width of the moustache is not to extend beyond an imaginary vertical line from the outside corner of the eyes."

Special circumstances or assignments may allow exceptions to the standards subject to authorization from an officer of the department.

Victoria police have not had any official guidelines on grooming.

The new standards are the outcome of a year of talks involving the police union and ex-chief Jack Gregory and present chief Snowdon.

They are a compromise agreed to by the union and the commanding officers.

They are more restrictive than other police force guidelines. Saanich policemen may wear beards, for example.

It's time too run: volcano watchers

OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI) — Gov. Dixy Lee Ray was urged today to evacuate all scientists, loggers and property owners from the area around volcanic Mount St. Helens by state officials concerned that tons of rock and ice on the peak's north face may collapse some 4,000 feet into Spirit Lake.

The governor's volcano watch group made the request after reviewing U.S. Geological Survey reports that the Goat Rocks area has bulged 20 feet in the last four days — an indication that lava might be moving into the base of the mountain.

State Department of Emergency Services spokesman Rick Lavalla said the watch group proposed the establishment of "red" and "blue" hazard areas around the mountain to avoid the danger of an avalanche, which could include the breakup of four 130-foot-thick glaciers.

"The hardest thing is to convince people of the danger," Lavalla said. "The mountain looks so serene, so people can't fathom 4,000 vertical feet of earth, rock and ice plunging into the lake in less than two minutes."

Lavalla said the immediate danger posed by the mountain is the possibility of the slide, which could bury several lodges, scout camps and a U.S. Forest Service ranger station.

Geologists said the cause of the bulging was either due to magma (molten rock) rising inside the mountain or the constant earthquakes in the area.

Shortly after Mount St. Helens began spouting steam and ash March 27 following 123 years of dormancy, Gov. Ray declared a state of emergency in the isolated area in the southwest Washington Cascades. However, loggers, scientists, residents and media personel have had limited access.

One of those residents is 83-year-old Harry R. Truman, the operator of St. Helens Lodge for 50 years, who says he won't leave "my mountain" unless it is "feet first."

The watch group's proposed "red zone" would encompass the immediate areas to the west and south, and the entire Spirit Lake area to the north and east. No one would be permitted in this area.

The blue zone would extend five miles outside the red zone and most of State Route 504 to a point 15 miles east of Interstate 5.

Workers ordered back

TRAIL (CP) — B.C. Labor Relations Board has ordered 3,000 striking mine workers at the Cominco Ltd. operation in Trail back to work.

The LRB order early today also forces management to accept the return to work with no action against the strikers — all members of United Steelworkers of America.

The wildcat strike began Monday when about 600 employees walked off the job, followed Tuesday by a full shutdown.

A Steelworkers spkoesman said the union is urging its members to obey the back-to-work order.

City urged to end panhandling rash

The centre will be open until midnight all summer to handle late-arriving tourists and there is a concern about lack of police protection for the young women.

Chamber vice-president Ron Campion has set up a special committee to investigate the extent of the problem and a letter will be sent to city hall as soon as the study is completed.

"This a a serious problem and it appears to be getting worse," Campion said.

Nootka Court merchants have also complained to city hall.

Acs said restaurants and other businesses are becoming concerned about the number of panhandlers approaching their customers.

Acs said he has lived in Victoria for 22 years and had never seen the problem so bad.

"When they had tougher laws there was never any begging in the downtown area and now it's everywhere."

He said police should be armed with an anti-loitering bylaw so they could tell people to move on.

"Right now if you call the police, the panhandler just promises he won't obstruct anyone and that's all that happens. As soon as the policeman leaves, he is back at it again."

One year ago, former alderman Murray Glazier attempted to get an anti-begging bylaw through council but it was defeated.

Some aldermen were concerned about spending upwards of $400 to prosecute someone who was on the street begging for a dime.

Trade cars I'll pay, boss urges

BOLTON, Ont. (CP) — A company president who says he hates the Soviet Union has asked five employees who drive Russian-made Ladas to trade them for some other model of car — at his expense.

"It was a request, not an order, and they all agreed to join my individual protest against the invasion of Afghanistan," Robert Schad of Husky Injection Moulding Systems said Tuesday.

"They weren't happy with the Ladas' performance anyway, and the company will pay whatever it costs them — well, anything within reason — to buy similar models."

He said he also advised the other 300 employees at his plastics plant against buying Ladas if they want to park on the company parking lot in this community about 25 kilometres northwest of Toronto.

"I believe it is up to every individual who loves freedom to support government measures against the Russians," he said.

Canada Cup off to boycott Soviets

for four years and then they can't go. Why should we play?"

Phil Esposito of New York Rangers said the tournament can't go ahead until the NHL Players' Association approves player participation. Esposito said he would recommend at the association meetings May 29 that if a Canada Cup is held, the Soviet Union be excluded.

Montreal team-mate Rod Langway, an American, said: "I have a brother serving in the armed forces in West Germany.

"I would not want to play against the Russians."

Other NHL players to express similar sentiments included Pierre Laroche, Mark Napier, Steve Shutt and Bob Gainey of the Canadiens and Lanny McDonald of the Colorado Rockies.

NHL officials have the same opinion as the players.

"I feel the NHL has a strong obligation to back the boycott and a way in which it can be done is to exclude the Soviet participation in the Canada Cup," said Harry Sinden, Boston Bruins general manager.

"Whether people out there realize it or not the Russians have a war going on in Afghanistan," said Frank Griffiths, majority shareholder of the Vancouver Canucks. "And to my way of thinking anyway, I consider it damn foolishness to subsidize them in a Canada Cup tournament."

Even longtime NHL foes, Harold Ballard and Ed Snider, agreed the Canada Cup should be called off.

"We must address ourselves to public opinion," said Snider, Philadelphia Flyers owner. "And if the anti-Soviet sentiment is as strong as it appears to be, we should cancel the tournament."

Ballard was one of the first to announce his opposition to the tournament, saying he would not allow a game played in Maple Leaf Gardens if the Soviet Union is among the six teams invited.

However, Eagleson noted that the Gardens is the proposed site for a World Cup gymnastics meet in October when Russian athletes are expected to compete.

Firebombs probed

VANCOUVER (CP) — An investigation is under way into a second firebomb attack on the home of a provincial human resources ministry employee, police said Tuesday.

Police said a Molotov cocktail caused minor damage to the front porch of a home in which Robin Katherine Knights, 37, lives early Sunday.

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Time-sharing or condominium interval ownership — they call it condominiums by the slice — has come to Victoria.

It involves a townhouse project on the Esquimalt border and if the developer can clear a legal hurdle, there will be several dozen owners making use of the five units over the space of a year.

It has been held up by the city in a legal fight over interpretation of a word in a land-use contract.

Verlaan Industries of Vancouver wants to market five townhouses at 723 Sea Terrace in four-week segments, mainly to Prairie residents and Americans.

But city council's land management committee voted Tuesday to oppose the project, unlike neighboring Esquimalt.

The project straddles the municipal boundary, with two units in Esquimalt and three in Victoria. Esquimalt originally agreed with Victoria, then reversed itself and said it had no objections.

Ald. Bob Wright said time-sharing is just another name for a hotel and he is against Sea Terrace Villas being sold on that basis because it is in a residential area.

The development is next to Barnard Park on the harbor and overlooks West Bay. The neighborhood is a mixture of highrise apartments, condominium townhouses and single-family houses of varying quality.

Wright said council's Advisory Planning Commission is going to study time-sharing and will report to council in three or four months with recommendations on where such developments should be allowed in the city.

If time-sharing is allowed in residential neighborhoods, then the city is opening itself up to quasi-hotel businesses everywhere, Wright said.

Sea Terrace Villas time-sharing project is the first of its kind in Victoria or Vancouver, although there are several elsewhere in B.C. — at Whistler Mountain ski resort, Fairmont Hot Springs, Shuswap Lake and the 108 Mile Ranch — and in Ontario and Alberta.

The St. Ives condominium townhouse development at Shuswap, 110 kilometres northeast of Kamloops, was the first in the country.

Paxon Marketing Corp. of Victoria has planned a major sales pitch paign for Sea Terrace Villas in Alberta and Saskatchewan and the U.S., aimed at Prairie people who taditionally winter in the city.

But none of the time-shares can be sold until the developer gets an amendment to the original land-use contract under which the townhouses were built last year.

They were to be conventional condominium townhouses, but they didn't move and the original builder sold the project to Verlaan which adopted the time-share plan. The land-use contract specifically forbids transient accommodation.

Lawyer Ellis Achtem told the committee the company's interpretation of that clause is that time-sharing is not considered a transient use because the people living there will be the owners.

He said the project is a high-class development, with $30,000 spent on furnishing each townhouse. The owners won't put pressures on the municipality for such services as schools, but they will be paying taxes, he added.

Because land-use contracts have been eliminated by the provincial government since the Sea Terrace Villas were built, the owners must go to the B.C. Supreme Court to have the document altered.

Patrick Wemyss of Paxon, director of marketing for the project, said in an interview the cost of the time-shares is not yet final because all expenses are not in yet. Until the legal battle is settled, nobody will buy.

He estimated the time-shares will cost between $4,500 and $6,500 per week with buyers having to take a minimum of four weeks.

On top of that will be a maintenance fee of $125 per week of occupancy. Wemyss said there have been about 100 inquiries about purchasing.

"They're popular because they lock the cost of going on vacation," said Wemyss.

Owners will leave and check in at Sea Terrace Villas on a Saturday. The units have to be vacated by 10 a.m. and the next time-sharer may take over at 4 p.m. In the intervening six hours, the townhouse is readied for the next occupants.

Wemyss said they will find enough food in the refrigerator for a meal that night and the liquor cabinet will be stocked with his favorite beverages.

Maid service is provided once a week for the fully-furnished units. They come complete with dishes, cutlery and placemats, even records for the stereo and current magazines.

The company calls them "limited edition second homes" which will appeal to a lot of residents of Tabor or Vegreville, Alberta.

If the idea of spending the same four weeks every year in Victoria doesn't appeal, then the one-twelfth owner can barter his time-share for somebody else's at a ski resort or near Disneyworld in Florida or the 108 Mile Ranch in the Cariboo.

There are several organizations with exchange listings available for an annual membership fee plus a charge when an exchange is set up.

Princess in waiting . . . for action by Victoria

The Princess Marguerite, a fixture of the Victoria waterfront for 30 years or more, is gone.

The Maggie was towed out of the harbor Tuesday to Burrard-Yarrows shipyard in Esquimalt harbor where she will be put into mothballs until the government decides on her final disposition.

Transportation Minister Alex Fraser said the aging ferry had to be moved so the dock could undergo the minor changes needed to accommodate the ferry-cum-hydrofoil service that will replace her.

What happens to the Marguerite now?

The government has said she will never be put back into service but other than that, no decision has been made.

"The only offer that I'm aware of is what the premier made to the people of Victoria — that they could have it for a floating museum. But I'm not aware of any response to that offer," Fraser said.

Police study centralizing of services

By NORMAN GIDNEY

The five Victoria-area municipalities with their own police forces have begun talks on the possibility of a partial amalgamation of services, Mayor Bill Tindall disclosed today.

Mayors and police chiefs of Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Central Saanich met Tuesday for several hours to discuss the issue, Tindall said, and another meeting will be held within 10 days.

He didn't use the word amalgamation to describe the municipalities' aim, but referred to centralizing certain police functions.

A central records section and a common dispatch office headed the list of items discussed, Tindall told the Victoria police board.

Also on the agenda were a 911 emergency telephone number, central identification section, a common dog squad, police lockup, major crime investigation unit, central purchasing and a lie detector unit.

There was no agreement on details at the meeting, but Tindall said there is a sense of urgency. Saanich is considering a new police building and wants a decision soon on centralization.

Tindall said the mayors — acting as chairman of their police boards — agreed there would be very little savings made by centralizing police functions, but it would improve efficiency and service.

The municipalities' next step will be for administrative steps to put together figures on costs and find out what part the provincial government will play in the centralization process.

The mayor said the municipalities expect some provincial contribution towards the cost, much as the government now helps fund municipal policing in towns and cities without their own forces.

In communities of a certain size, B.C. pays all the cost of bringing in an RCMP detachment. Larger towns pay a share of the RCMP cost, but the province still contributes a significant amount.

The five Victoria-area municipalities pay all the bills connected with their municipal forces. The city of Victoria's taxpayers this year will pay more than $4 million for their 160-man force.

Tindall indicated that centralization would probably help the smaller forces most. For example, he said that Esquimalt, Central Saanich and Oak Bay have limited resources for detective work.

A central major crimes unit, with officers seconded from all the departments, would work on serious crimes in the five municipalities, much like the special Joint Forces Operations now work. JFO handles mostly drug cases and is composed of the municipal police forces and the RCMP.

Tindall said the mayors and chiefs are acting now because of concern at the lack of action on a year-old report to the B.C. Police Commission, a section of which suggested that the Victoria municipalities study unification of their police departments.

In a related development, Victoria chief William Snowdon told the police board that area chiefs have decided to establish regular monthly meetings to discuss areas of common concern.

The five municipal chiefs — Snowdon, Saanich's Bob Peterson, Irv Bailey of Oak Bay, Bob Miles of Central Saanich and Art Burton of Esquimalt — have agreed to meet the third Wednesday of every month. The first one will be May 21 at Victoria police station, Snowdon said.

"The purpose was to discuss over-all where we can act in unison to help each other in certain areas," he said.

Broadmead centre approved

The 6-3 vote to allow The Bay and Broadmead Farms Ltd. to construct a 174,000-square-foot shopping centre in Royal Oak comes less than a week after council approved doubling the size of the planned Tillicum shopping centre.

Council approved rezoning the 16-acre Broadmead Village site between Royal Oak Avenue and Royal Oak Drive after a four-hour public hearing.

The Bay and Broadmead will start construction of the $12-million development this summer and it will be completed in the spring of 1981.

Saanich is now fighting an injunction preventing it from issuing building permits to developers Cal Investments Ltd. for the 495,000-square-foot Tillicum project.

A number of residents at the public hearing said the Broadmead development is unnecessary.

The residents also said it will harm property values and the environment and create traffic problems.

The Broadmead plan also violates the official community plan for the area, which designates the property residential.

Broadmead Ratepayers Association representative Christopher Dubetz told aldermen there is no guarantee the shopping development, which will include The Bay, a supermarket and a number of small specialty stores, will not be expanded in future.

But company spokesman Merv Mawson indicated the development, in the planning stages since 1970, will remain the same size.

Mawson promised Ald. John Mika the company will agree to a restrictive covenant limiting the size of the centre to 174,000 square feet.

Mika pointed out Saanich has approved a total of 913,000 square feet of commercial development during the past week, more than the combined floor space of both Mayfair and Hillside malls.

However, Mika said he would vote in favor of the rezoning if a restrictive covenant was put in place.

Ald. Robert Cameron, Irene Block and Howard Sturrock voted against the rezoning.

Cameron said it will encourage population growth to take place in the direction of Central Saanich and peninsula farmland.

Block said she is concerned Royal Oak merchants will suffer from a large commercial development next door.

Sturrock said the development is too large for the needs of the community.

A motion by Mika to delay rezoning until a May 7 neighborhood planning meeting called by Royal Oak residents was defeated 5-4.

Show and go time

Customized, modified, restored, funny, classic, off-the-road . . . you name it and that kind of car, truck, van or motorcycle will probably be at the third annual International Autorama opening Friday at Memorial Arena and the adjacent curling rink.

Competing with the million-dollar-plus display of show and go chrome, steel and rubber for attention will be such celebrities as Willie Mosconi, pool player par excellence.

Who could possibly best Willie for everyone's attention? The younger set might be more interested in Spiderman. The Marvel Comics' character will be around to sign autographs Saturday and Sunday.

The show will also feature displays, contests and continuous showings of the movie American Graffiti.

The 600-horsepower car has an antique pool table mounted on the back. It's billed as the fastest pool table in the world and Mosconi should love it if he can figure out where to stand.

A turbo-charged, 74-inch Harley-Davidson, owned by Syd DeSoto and recently judged the best two-wheeled vehicle in North America, will be on hand, along with Magic Pan, a gold-plated bike from California.

The show is open 6 to 11 p.m. Friday, noon to 11 p.m. Saturday and noon to 10 p.m. Sunday.

The show is one of 200 such international events sanctioned annually in North America by the International Show Car Association.
